GRANT TO ASK RECOUNT OF VOTE DEFEAT

All Negotiations Refused In London Prison Sitdown

Governor Says Inmates Must Obey Rulings

1,000 Convicts Quiet Although Refusing To Do Assigned Work

COLUMBUS (AP)—Gov. Frank J. Lausche today issued an order against negotiating with convicts at London Prison Farm during their sitdown strike.

"There will be no negotiations of any character whatsoever while they are disobeying the rules and regulations of the institution, and no consideration of their complaints while they are disobeying," the governor said.

His statement followed a report that conditions were "peaceful" in the sitdown demonstration of 1,100 of the 1,700 inmates in protest over pay for their work.

State Corrections Commissioner M. C. Koblentz said the strike was over alleged failure of prison officials to give proper credit to inmates for work performed at the London farm, a branch of Ohio Penitentiary.

Circleville's Company I of the National Guard was on the alert as a sitdown strike of inmates at the London Prison Farm spread early today. Approximately 1,100 men of the farm's 1,700 population are now involved, according to Corrections Commissioner M. C. Koblentz.

So far there has been no violence or demonstrations. The strike over alleged failure of prison officials to give proper credit to inmates for work performed triggered the strike yesterday.

At first, Koblentz said, only one dormitory housing 233 inmates was involved. But today, five other dormitories joined the sitdown.

Supt. R. B. Eckle has asked each of the dormitories to send a committee to confer with him.

So far, Eckle reported, he has talked with one committee and another committee is being formed. Koblentz said penal officials have no information on the formation of other committees.

As the strike spread, Ohio National Guard troops and several carloads of state highway patrolmen were standing by in the event of violence.

* * *

KOBLENTZ identified the origin of the strike yesterday as dormitory No. 7. It is not an honor dormitory.

None of the men in No. 7 has eaten since yesterday noon, Koblentz said. He added the strikers "have been informed they may not participate in any of the normal activities at the farm until they return to work."

In short, Koblentz conceded, that means "No work, no eat."

The striking convicts demanded proper credit be given for the number of hours worked, Koblentz said. They also wanted credit for 200 working hours a month even if they put in less.

Inmates are paid 8 cents an hour for prison work if they have dependents, 4 cents without dependents.

Three Ohio National Guard companies in London, Washington C. H. and Circleville were alerted for possible trouble.

Guardsmen were called from all over Pickaway County at 7 p. m. Wednesday.

One hour and a half after the alert had been sounded, 70 percent of the local unit, Company I, of the 166th Regimental Combat Team, had been mustered at the armory on E. Franklin St.

U. S. Intensifies Its Search For Middle Eastern Peace

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Eisenhower has focused the United States search for Middle Eastern peace once more on economic aid and a military willingness to guarantee security.

At the same time, he emphasized yesterday that while the United States will continue to consider requests for arms for self defense, it will not "contribute to an arms competition in the Near East."

Taking a personal hand in American efforts to end Arab-Israel friction, the President issued a statement in Denver renewing his endorsement of "the economic and security contributions which this country was prepared to make," as outlined by Secretary of State Dulles last Aug. 26.

In a New York speech, Dulles proposed then:

1. Loans to compensate refugees, develop water resources and irrigate arid lands in the Middle East.

2. U. S. participation in formal treaty commitments to guarantee the embattled borders between Israel and her Arab neighbors, if the two sides agree on a permanent peace.

Those points also got simultaneous attention overseas. In Geneva Dulles and British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan considered the possibility of raising money to help Egypt harness the waters of the River Nile.

In London, Prime Minister Anthony Eden echoed Dulles' August offer to guarantee the frontiers once the Israelis and Arab states agree to a permanent peace.

Eden accused Russia of creating additional danger in the Middle East by shipment of arms and said "it is fantastic to pretend that this deliberate act of policy was an innocent commercial transaction."

Eisenhower's statement made no direct mention of the arms shipments, but after referring to U.S. and U.N. efforts to promote peace and "minimize violence in the area," he said with obvious reference to Russia:

"I hope that other nations of the world will cooperate in this endeavor, thereby contributing significantly to world peace."

The United States, Britain and France agreed in a joint declaration in 1950 to work to prevent an arms race and any forcible change of borders in the Middle East.

Referring to that, Eisenhower said "this still remains our policy."

Officials said Eisenhower's statement contained nothing new in the way of policy declaration. However, it was clear the President had shifted the spotlight from the short range efforts of U. N. officials to Arab-Israel borders, to the longe hopes inherent in the Dulles speech.

Neither Israel nor the Arab states has accepted the Dulles proposal.

Russia Fires Its Leading Architects

Chief Moscow Engineer On Tour Of U.S. When Crackdown Announced

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union has cracked down on four of its top architects, including Alexander V. Vlasov, who now is completing an inspection tour of home building techniques in the United States.

The government says the nation's builders have been wasting money on ornate decoration and skyscrapers and siregarding the needs of the people for housing.

Vlasov, who is president of the Academy of Architects of the Soviet Union, was stripped of his government decorations and dismissed as chief architect of Moscow. The same action was taken against D. N. Cechulin.

Announcing the dismissals last nght, a government statement said two other nationally known architects, Polykov and Boretsky, were deprived of their Stalin prize laureates.

A spokesman or the Academy of Architects said Vlasov was still president of the organization.

Vlasov was in New York with the other members of the 10-man Russian housing delegation when the news was received. The Russians were scheduled to leave today after a month-long visit. The New York Times quoted him as saying "I cannot comment on the report as I am not acquainted with it."

* * *

TELEPHONE CALLS to the delegation's hotel rooms went unanswered this morning.

The Herald Tribune said Vlasov was picked up at the New York hotel, where the delegation is staying, yesterday morning by Victor Zegal, second secretary of the Soviet embassy in Washington. The newspaper quoted a delegation spokesman as saying the two spent the day shopping. The remainder of the delegation spent most of yesterday visiting a New York skyscraper.

Polykov and Boretsky were the builders of the 28-story Leningrad Hotel. Loss of their Stalin prize laureates was regarded as almost tantamount to dismissal.

The Stalin prizes, awarded in various fields, include a gold medal bearing Stalin's image and 100,000 rubles for top winners. The Russians quote the ruble at four to the dollar.

The announcement of one of the biggest official shakeups in recent years was made by the Central Committee of the Communist party and the Council of Ministers.

It apparently wrote a finish to a so-called Western trend in building here. It condemned "towerlike superstructures, numerous ornamental colonnades and other architectural superfluities taken from days of yore."

Millions of square yards of living space for workers were lost, the statement said, because of building irregularities. It also said a "large amount of government funds have been over-expended."

The government ordered all models of structures to be submitted for study before plans for buildings are approved.

Tuesday Tally Gave Crites Close Margin

Earlier Report Had Republican Winner By Single Ballot

Harry Grant, Republican candidate here for third ward councilman in Tuesday's elections, was preparing today to ask for a recount of his two-vote defeat.

Revised figures announced by the Pickaway County Board of Elections gave Councilman George Crites, Democrat, the narrow margin of victory in the unofficial returns, 170-168. However, earlier figures had indicated Grant had won the election by a single vote.

When the figures were changed, it was explained that an error had been made in the routine tabulation work. The city's third ward has two voting precincts.

Grant presumably planned to make his request for the recount on Saturday. It was understood the request has to be filed no later than that day.

* * *

THE Republican candidate had yet to make the formal request when he left early Thursday for his job out of the city, and was not expected back here until late afternoon. Public offices will be closed Friday, Veterans Day.

Interest in any recount will be widespread, not only because of the close race between the two candidates, but also because of the important role Crites plays in the city's financial picture.

The veteran city lawmaker is chairman of council's important finance committee, and so far the only member of council to go on record in favor of a city income tax for Circleville. Without new major sources of revenue, he has warned, the city faces financial chaos.

Rock Hudson, Secretary Wed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film star Rock Hudson, who often said he'd never marry until he was 30, is honeymooning with his agent's secretary today—a week before he reaches that age.

Rugged Rock, a 6-foot-4 Navy veteran and one of the screen's handsomest bachelors eloped Wednesday with brunette Phyllis Gates, 25. They drove to Santa Barbara, 90 miles north of here and were married by the Rev. N. B. Thorpe, pastor of Santa Barbara's Trinity Lutheran Church. They proceeded in Hudson's car to an unannounced destination.

Miss Gates is secretary to agent Henry Willson, who arranged Hudson's first screen test in 1948.

FINDLAY (AP) — Fire destroyed three incubators, 140,000 eggs and about 10,000 newly hatched chicks early today at the Sunbeam Hatchery on the south edge of Findlay. Fire Chief Homer Johnson estimated damage at $36,700.

My colleague Dr. Schwine thought up this practical idea while he was at the drafting board drawing up plans for some Ranch Type Split Level Igloos that will have all modern conveniences including hot and cold running ice and wall-to-wall blubber. Some time ago Dr. Schwine realized that Eskimos represented a great untapped market and he decided to bring them the advantages of civilization. Thanks to him our northern neighbors are now able to drop into their local trading post and purchase such items as Instant Whale Oil, Redi-Mix Walrus Gumbo, White Wall Sleigh Runners, Three Way Oil Lamps and Open Toed Snow Shoes. Maybe he's right when he says "There's no business like Snow Business!"

Ike All Ready For Trip Home

Chief To Leave Denver At 11 a.m. Tomorrow

DENVER (AP) — Today is President Eisenhower's 48th and last full day in Fitzsimons Army Hospital. Tomorrow it's off to Washington and "welcome home."

The mood at the hospital on this final full day, among the doctors, nurses and all the others who have cared for the 65-year-old President, is a joyous one. They are all relieved that his damaged heart is mending well.

And Eisenhower himself undoubtedly is happiest of all, although his wife is feeling mighty good about the way things are going.

With checkout time just a day off, the President's business agenda was being kept light to assure as much last minute rest as possible. He had no official government visitors scheduled today except for his chief aide, Sherman Adams.

Departure from the hospital is fixed for about 10:30 a. m. EST. tomorrow and 30 minutes later he will take off for Washington aboard his private plane, Columbine III.

His doctors agree that the President could have left the hospital a few days ago if he had been willing to be carried aboard the plane. But he insisted that when he did leave he was going to be able to walk up the 19-step ramp.

* * *

NOW HE IS able to do that. Yesterday he walked up and down a 20-step flight of stairs at the hospital a half dozen times.

In going up the ramp to his plane at Lowry Air Force Base here, Eisenhower will pause on about the seventh step at a microphone in place there and address the nation briefly on television and radio. He probably will express thanks for the prayers for his recovery and for the tens of thousands of "get well" messages he has received.

He also plans another brief informal talk on arrival at the Washington airport.

2 White Men Freed Of All Charges In Famed Till Case

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Two white men today were free of all charges in the celebrated case of Emmett Till, the 14-year-old Chicago Negro boy who disappeared while vacationing on his uncle's farm in Mississippi.

A Leflore County grand jury yesterday declined to indict white half-brothers Roy Bryant, 24, and J. W. Milam, 36, on charges of kidnaping Till from the cabin of his sharecropper uncle.

Less than a month ago, a trial jury in a neighboring county found the two half-brothers innocent of murdering Till on grounds there was reasonable doubt about identification of a battered body pulled from the Tallahatchie river.

"The question now arises," said Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins of the NAACP in a statement in New York, "since Mississippi jurors have determined that Milam and Bryant did not kidnap and murder young Till, who did commit the crimes?"

Wilkins said the grand jury action, which cancelled $10,000 bonds posted by the two men, "comes as no surprise to anyone acquainted with the administration of justice in Mississippi."

* * *

TILL'S MOTHER, Mrs. Mamie Bradley of Chicago, commented "just about everything has run out on me now. I don't know what to say. I don't see how they could fail to indict those men."

The all-white, 20-man grand jury called four men who testified for the state in the murder trial. They were Till's uncle, Mose Wright; farm hand Willie Reed, a Negro who worked on a plantation owned by Milam's brother, Leslie; Sheriff George Smith and Deputy John Ed Cothran.

Wright told the murder trial jury that two men, one addressed as Bryant, the other bald-headed like Milam, came to his cabin before dawn Aug. 28 and took Till.

He said they accused the boy of getting fresh with Bryant's wife in the country store Bryant operates at Money, Miss.

The sheriff and his deputy related that Bryant and Milam admitted taking the boy but said they released him when he turned out to be "the wrong one."

Reed, in halting, stammering testimony, attempted to place Milam with Till several hours after the purported release. The jury foreman said his testimony was disregarded.

"That's the end of the case as far as this county is concerned," said Dist. Atty. Stanny Sanders, after the decision was reached.

Ike Says Press Freedom Essential To Citizenship

CHICAGO (AP)—President Eisenhower today called freedom of press "essential to . . . enlightened discharge of the obligations of citizenship."

The remark was in a telegram to the opening session of the convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity. The President said:

"An integral provision of the Constitution guarantees to the people freedom of the press, a freedom essential to their enlightened discharge of the obligations of citizenship in our republic.

"The preserving of this freedom, with regard for the demands of national security, and the striving for truth and accuracy on the part of those whose job it is to keep our people informed, will serve to protect all our freedoms."

South Africa Irked By U.N. Race Probe

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—South Africa says she will recall her delegations from the United Nations because of a decision for continued investigation of South Africa's race segregation policy.

W. C. Duplessis, South Africa's chief delegate to the U. N. General Assembly, made the announcement to the Assembly's special political committee yesterday.

The committee had just passed a resolution, 37-7, to go ahead with a long investigation of the apartheid policy in South Africa.

Southern Catholics Voice Racial Stand

JESUIT BEND, La. (AP)—New Orleans archdiocesan officials today were faced with a petition being circulated by a group of Roman Catholic laymen protesting assignment of Negro priests.

The petition said integration was contrary to church teaching and assignment of Negro priests was a step toward breaking down the segregation barriers.

"If no white priest is available, let the church remain closed," the group said.

The archbishop last month took disciplinary action against the Jesuit Bend congregation when parishioners turned away the Rev. Gerald Lewis, a Negro priest assigned to help out in a shortage of priests.

The men were riding in a truck which hit a bridge abutment on U. S. 62, 10 miles south of here.

All Negotiations Refused In London Prison Sitdown

Governor Says Inmates Must Obey Rulings

1,000 Convicts Quiet Although Refusing To Do Assigned Work

COLUMBUS (AP)—Gov. Frank J. Lausche today issued an order against negotiating with convicts at London Prison Farm during their sitdown strike.

"There will be no negotiations of any character whatsoever while they are disobeying the rules and regulations of the institution, and no consideration of their complaints while they are disobeying," the governor said.

His statement followed a report that conditions were "peaceful" in the sitdown demonstration of 1,100 of the 1,700 inmates in protest over pay for their work.

State Corrections Commissioner M. C. Koblentz said the strike was over alleged failure of prison officials to give proper credit to inmates for work performed at the London farm, a branch of Ohio Penitentiary.

Circleville's Company I of the National Guard was on the alert as a sitdown strike of inmates at the London Prison Farm spread early today. Approximately 1,100 men of the farm's 1,700 population are now involved, according to Corrections Commissioner M. C. Koblentz.

So far there has been no violence or demonstrations. The strike over alleged failure of prison officials to give proper credit to inmates for work performed triggered the strike yesterday.

At first, Koblentz said, only one dormitory housing 233 inmates was involved. But today, five other dormitories joined the sitdown.

Supt. R. B. Eckle has asked each of the dormitories to send a committee to confer with him.

So far, Eckle reported, he has talked with one committee and another committee is being formed. Koblentz said penal officials have no information on the formation of other committees.

As the strike spread, Ohio National Guard troops and several carloads of state highway patrolmen were standing by in the event of violence.

* * *

KOBLENTZ identified the origin of the strike yesterday as dormitory No. 7. It is not an honor dormitory.

None of the men in No. 7 has eaten since yesterday noon, Koblentz said. He added the strikers "have been informed they may not participate in any of the normal activities at the farm until they return to work."

In short, Koblentz conceded, that means "No work, no eat."

The striking convicts demanded proper credit be given for the number of hours worked, Koblentz said. They also wanted credit for 200 working hours a month even if they put in less.

Inmates are paid 8 cents an hour for prison work if they have dependents, 4 cents without dependents.

Three Ohio National Guard companies in London, Washington C. H. and Circleville were alerted for possible trouble.

Guardsmen were called from all over Pickaway County at 7 p. m. Wednesday.

One hour and a half after the alert had been sounded, 70 percent of the 166th Regimental Combat Team, had been mustered at the armory on E. Franklin St.

Tuesday Tally Gave Crites Close Margin

Earlier Report Had Republican Winner By Single Ballot

Harry Grant, Republican candidate here for third ward councilman in Tuesday's elections, was preparing today to ask for a recount of his two-vote defeat.

Revised figures announced by the Pickaway County Board of Elections gave Councilman George Crites, Democrat, the narrow margin of victory in the unofficial returns, 170-168. However, earlier figures had indicated Grant had won the election by a single vote.

When the figures were changed, it was explained that an error had been made in the routine tabulation work. The city's third ward has two voting precincts.

Grant presumably planned to make his request for the recount on Saturday. It was understood the request has to be filed no later than that day.

* * *

THE Republican candidate had yet to make the formal request when he left early Thursday for his job out of the city, and was not expected back here until late afternoon. Public offices will be closed Friday, Veterans Day.

Interest in any recount will be widespread, not only because of the close race between the two candidates, but also because of the important role Crites plays in the city's financial picture.

The veteran city lawmaker is chairman of council's important finance committee, and so far the only member of council to go on record in favor of a city income tax for Circleville. Without new major sources of revenue, he has warned, the city faces financial chaos.

Rock Hudson, Secretary Wed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film star Rock Hudson, who often said he'd never marry until he was 30, is honeymooning with his agent's secretary today—a week before he reaches that age.

Rugged Rock, a 6-foot-4 Navy veteran and one of the screen's handsomest bachelors eloped Wednesday with brunette Phyllis Gates, 25. They drove to Santa Barbara, 90 miles north of here and were married by the Rev. N. B. Thorpe, pastor of Santa Barbara's Trinity Lutheran Church. They proceeded in Hudson's car to an unannounced destination.

Miss Gates is secretary to agent Henry Willson, who arranged Hudson's first screen test in 1948.

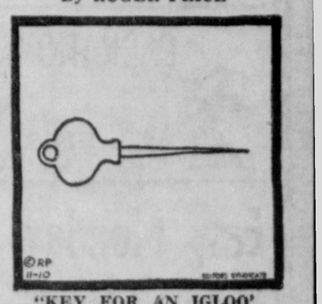
FINDLAY (AP) — Fire destroyed three incubators, 140,000 eggs and about 10,000 newly hatched chicks early today at the Sunbeam Hatchery on the south edge of Findlay. Fire Chief Homer Johnson estimated damage at $36,700.

DROODLES

By ROGER PRICE



"KEY FOR AN IGLOO'

My colleague Dr. Schwine thought up this practical idea while he was at the drafting board drawing up plans for some Ranch Type Split Level Igloos that will have all modern conveniences including hot and cold running ice and wall-to-wall blubber. Some time ago Dr. Schwine realized that Eskimos represented a great untapped market and he decided to bring them the advantages of civilization. Thanks to him our northern neighbors are now able to drop into their local trading post and purchase such items as Instant Whale Oil, Redi-Mix Walrus Gumbo, White Wall Sleigh Runners, Three Way Oil Lamps and Open Toed Snow Shoes. Maybe he's right when he says "There's no business like Snow Business!"

Ike All Ready For Trip Home

Chief To Leave Denver At 11 a.m. Tomorrow

DENVER (AP) — Today is President Eisenhower's 48th and last full day in Fitzsimons Army Hospital. Tomorrow it's off to Washington and "welcome home."

The mood at the hospital on this final full day, among the doctors, nurses and all the others who have cared for the 65-year-old President, is a joyous one. They are all relieved that his damaged heart is mending well.

And Eisenhower himself undoubtedly is happiest of all, although his wife is feeling mighty good about the way things are going.

With checkout time just a day off, the President's business agenda was being kept light to assure as much last minute rest as possible. He had no official government visitors scheduled today except for his chief aide, Sherman Adams.

Departure from the hospital is fixed for about 10:30 a. m. EST. tomorrow and 30 minutes later he will take off for Washington aboard his private plane, Columbine III.

His doctors agree that the President could have left the hospital a few days ago if he had been willing to be carried aboard the plane. But he insisted that when he did leave he was going to be able to walk up the 19-step ramp.

* * *

NOW HE IS able to do that. Yesterday he walked up and down a 20-step flight of stairs at the hospital a half dozen times.

In going up the ramp to his plane at Lowry Air Force Base here, Eisenhower will pause on about the seventh step at a microphone in place there and address the nation briefly on television and radio. He probably will express thanks for the prayers for his recovery and for the tens of thousands of "get well" messages he has received.

He also plans another brief informal talk on arrival at the Washington airport.

2 White Men Freed Of All Charges In Famed Till Case

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Two white men today were free of all charges in the celebrated case of Emmett Till, the 14-year-old Chicago Negro boy who disappeared while vacationing on his uncle's farm in Mississippi.

A Leflore County grand jury yesterday declined to indict white half-brothers Roy Bryant, 24, and J. W. Milam, 36, on charges of kidnaping Till from the cabin of his sharecropper uncle.

Less than a month ago, a trial jury in a neighboring county found the two half-brothers innocent of murdering Till on grounds there was reasonable doubt about identification of a battered body pulled from the Tallahatchie river.

"The question now arises," said Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins of the NAACP in a statement in New York, "since Mississippi jurors have determined that Milam and Bryant did not kidnap and murder young Till, who did commit the crimes?"

Wilkins said the grand jury action, which cancelled $10,000 bonds posted by the two men, "comes as no surprise to anyone acquainted with the administration of justice in Mississippi."

* * *

TILL'S MOTHER, Mrs. Mamie Bradley of Chicago, commented "just about everything has run out on me now. I don't know what to say. I don't see how they could fail to indict those men."

The all-white, 20-man grand jury called four men who testified for the state in the murder trial. They were Till's uncle, Mose Wright; farm hand Willie Reed, a Negro who worked on a plantation owned by Milam's brother, Leslie; Sheriff George Smith and Deputy John Ed Cothran.

Wright told the murder trial jury that two men, one addressed as Bryant, the other bald-headed like Milam, came to his cabin before dawn Aug. 28 and took Till.

He said they accused the boy of getting fresh with Bryant's wife in the country store Bryant operates at Money, Miss.

The sheriff and his deputy related that Bryant and Milam admitted taking the boy but said they released him when he turned out to be "the wrong one."

Reed, in halting, stammering testimony, attempted to place Milam with Till several hours after the purported release. The jury foreman said his testimony was disregarded.

"That's the end of the case as far as this county is concerned," said Dist. Atty. Stanny Sanders, after the decision was reached.

Ike Says Press Freedom Essential To Citizenship

CHICAGO (AP)—President Eisenhower today called freedom of press "essential to . . . enlightened discharge of the obligations of citizenship."

The remark was in a telegram to the opening session of the convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity. The President said:

"An integral provision of the Constitution guarantees to the people freedom of the press, a freedom essential to their enlightened discharge of the obligations of citizenship in our republic.

"The preserving of this freedom, with regard for the demands of national security, and the striving for truth and accuracy on the part of those whose job it is to keep our people informed, will serve to protect all our freedoms."

South Africa Irked By U.N. Race Probe

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—South Africa says she will recall her delegations from the United Nations because of a decision for continued investigation of South Africa's race segregation policy.

W. C. Duplessis, South Africa's chief delegate to the U. N. General Assembly, made the announcement to the Assembly's special political committee yesterday.

The committee had just passed a resolution, 37-7, to go ahead with a long investigation of the apartheid policy in South Africa.

Southern Catholics Voice Racial Stand

JESUIT BEND, La. (AP)—New Orleans archdiocesan officials today were faced with a petition being circulated by a group of Roman Catholic laymen protesting assignment of Negro priests.

The petition said integration was contrary to church teaching and assignment of Negro priests was a step toward breaking down the segregation barriers.

"If no white priest is available, let the church remain closed," the group said.

The archbishop last month took disciplinary action against the Jesuit Bend congregation when parishioners turned away the Rev. Gerald Lewis, a Negro priest assigned to help out in a shortage of priests.

Sheriff Robbed

IRVINE, Ky. (AP) — A thief got away yesterday with $1,300 in cash and an undetermined amount of checks. His haul was made from the safe of Sheriff Fred Brandenburg.

Earl McGhee, 19, of Strawberry Plains, Tenn., received a fractured right arm and left leg.

The men were riding in a truck which hit a bridge abutment on U. S. 62, 10 miles south of here.

Governor Says Inmates Must Obey Rulings

armory with field packs and weapons ready for use until about 10 p. m., when the guardsmen were told to go home but to remain alert for possible recall.

Around 10 p. m., the State Patrol at London said it needed no help since everything appeared under control at that time.

First Lieutenant D. W. Dimity, commander of the local unit, termed the 70 percent turnout in one hour and a half as "very good."

Trouble broke out at the prison farm, approximately 40 miles from Circleville, about noon Wednesday when 233 of the 2,200 inmates began to "cause trouble". However, there was no violence.

The 233 prisoners were dissatisfied with the system used in crediting the number of hours worked at the farm. The men said they wanted credit for a minimum of 200 working hours per month. They also said they were not being given proper credit for actual hours worked.

Roderick Eckle, superintendent of the farm, said he was attempting to settle differences with a three-man group representing the prisoners. Maury C. Koblentz, chief of the State Division of Corrections, was also sitting in on the talks.

* * *

BECAUSE OF the dispute, the entire 150-man guard force at the farm was called on duty and the London post of the State Patrol was alerted. National Guard troops were also alerted at London and Washington C. H.

Members of the local unit were notified by phone, by Circleville police, sheriff's deputies and by county and village law enforcement officers.

The last time Company I served on duty was in the 1952 Halloween Ohio Penitentiary riots in Columbus. The unit remained on duty at the pen for six days.

Captain John McGinnis, former commander of Company I and now a member of the battalion staff, was present at the armory as an advisor. Other officers at the armory were Lt. Stanley Spring and Lt. Robert Shaw.

Maj. Gen. Leo M. Kreber, Ohio adjutant general, arrived on the scene to direct troop operations.

The state highway patrol said its men were stationed outside the prison grounds on a "standby basis." The patrol issued an "all-quiet" report early today.

Eckle said he had a night-long meeting with a three-man prisoner group to try to settle the issues. He promised that any deficiency in crediting working hours would be corrected.

Two Of Eight Levies Rejected; Others Pass By Small Margins

Two of eight township and village levies apparently failed to get voters' approval in Tuesday's elections. Many passed by narrow margins.

Presumably disapproved, despite the 173-to-163 margin in favor of it, was the Darby Township's cemetery one-mill levy for five years. The proposal needed a 60 percent majority, or 199 votes out of the 336 cast.

Also apparently rejected was Walnut Township's proposed five-tenths of one mill levy for its cemetery. It won 158 votes in favor, but 115 voters were opposed. It also required a 60 percent approval margin, of 163 votes.

* * *

OTHER levies which did pass include: five school tax levies which needed simple majorities to pass. They are:

Harrison Township: added one-mill tax for five years. Approved: 136-102.

Monroe: added one and one-half mill tax for five years. Approved: 168-150.

Saltcreek: renewal of two and seven-tenths mill tax and increase of three-tenths of one-mill (total, three mills) for five years. Approved: 300-80.

New Holland: renewal of one-mill cemetery levy for two years. Approved: 127-60. Needed a 60 percent majority for passage.

Cadillac

Beyond the Realm of Argument!

This is the season when conversations turn easily and often to motor cars.

And, in almost any gathering, you're likely to find a wide difference of opinion about the relative merits of the year's automotive offerings.

Until the talk turns to Cadillac!

Here is one car concerning which most motorists have a meeting of minds. And never before has Cadillac left so little room for argument as in 1956!

Certainly no one could behold the new Cadillac without recognizing it as the "car of cars". Its beautiful, graceful, flowing lines . . . its regal bearing on the highway . . . and its long, low silhouette are simply too significant to misunderstand.

Surely no one could ride in a new Cadillac and not agree that it is the Standard of the World. Its new fabrics and leathers are rich and luxurious almost beyond belief . . . and its interior appointments have been crafted with a jeweler's skill.

And we doubt if anyone could drive a new Cadillac and not understand that it is the finest-performing motor car of all time. Its great new engine is a revelation in power and performance . . . and its new Hydra-Matic Drive is incredibly smooth and responsive.

Truly, the evidence on the side of Cadillac has never been more apparent than it is today.

Why not come in soon—and see for yourself?

We'll be delighted to introduce you to Cadillac's great new styling . . . and to arrange a demonstration at the wheel . . . and to acquaint you with the new Sedan de Ville and Eldorado Seville.

You'll agree, we're certain, that Cadillac for 1956 is beyond the realm of argument!

Governor Says Inmates Must Obey Rulings

armory with field packs and weapons ready for use until about 10 p. m., when the guardsmen were told to go home but to remain alert for possible recall.

Around 10 p. m., the State Patrol at London said it needed no help since everything appeared under control at that time.

First Lieutenant D. W. Dimity, commander of the local unit, termed the 70 percent turnout in one hour and a half as "very good."

Trouble broke out at the prison farm, approximately 40 miles from Circleville, about noon Wednesday when 233 of the 2,200 inmates began to "cause trouble". However, there was no violence.

The 233 prisoners were dissatisfied with the system used in crediting the number of hours worked at the farm. The men said they wanted credit for a minimum of 200 working hours per month. They also said they were not being given proper credit for actual hours worked.

Roderick Eckle, superintendent of the farm, said he was attempting to settle differences with a three-man group representing the prisoners. Maury C. Koblentz, chief of the State Division of Corrections, was also sitting in on the talks.

* * *

BECAUSE OF the dispute, the entire 150-man guard force at the farm was called on duty and the London post of the State Patrol was alerted. National Guard troops were also alerted at London and Washington C. H.

Members of the local unit were notified by phone, by Circleville police, sheriff's deputies and by county and village law enforcement officers.

The last time Company I served on duty was in the 1952 Halloween Ohio Penitentiary riots in Columbus. The unit remained on duty at the pen for six days.

Captain John McGinnis, former commander of Company I and now a member of the battalion staff, was present at the armory as an advisor. Other officers at the armory were Lt. Stanley Spring and Lt. Robert Shaw.

Maj. Gen. Leo M. Kreber, Ohio adjutant general, arrived on the scene to direct troop operations.

The state highway patrol said its men were stationed outside the prison grounds on a "standby basis." The patrol issued an "all-quiet" report early today.

Eckle said he had a night-long meeting with a three-man prisoner group to try to settle the issues. He promised that any deficiency in crediting working hours would be corrected.

Two Of Eight Levies Rejected; Others Pass By Small Margins

Two of eight township and village levies apparently failed to get voters' approval in Tuesday's elections. Many passed by narrow margins.

Presumably disapproved, despite the 173-to-163 margin in favor of it, was the Darby Township's cemetery one-mill levy for five years. The proposal needed a 60 percent majority, or 199 votes out of the 336 cast.

Also apparently rejected was Walnut Township's proposed five-tenths of one mill levy for its cemetery. It won 158 votes in favor, but 115 voters were opposed. It also required a 60 percent approval margin, of 163 votes.

* * *

OTHER levies which did pass include: five school tax levies which needed simple majorities to pass. They are:

Harrison Township: added one-mill tax for five years. Approved: 136-102.

Monroe: added one and one-half mill tax for five years. Approved: 168-150.

Saltcreek: renewal of two and seven-tenths mill tax and increase of three-tenths of one-mill (total, three mills) for five years. Approved: 300-80.

Jackson: Renewal of two and seven-tenths mill tax and increase of one and three-tenths mill (total, four mills) for three years. Approved: 122-53.

Walnut: renewal of one and eight-tenths mill tax and increase of two-tenths (total, two mills) for three years. Approved: 170-120.

Walnut: five-tenths of one-mill tax for three years for cemetery fund. Approved: 158-115. Required 60 percent majority for passage. Passed by six vote margin.

New Holland: renewal of one-mill cemetery levy for two years. Approved: 127-60. Needed a 60 percent majority for passage.

Veterans Day Closings Set

Circleville business firms will remain open for regular shopping hours on Friday, Veterans Day—formerly known as "Armistice Day."

George Fuhrman, chairman of the retail merchants committee of the Circleville Chamber of Commerce, said the question of closing in observance of the holiday "has never been brought up for discussion". Fuhrman added that as far as he knew all stores would be open for their usual business.

All schools, both in Pickaway County and Circleville, plus St. Joseph's School will be closed all day Friday. In addition, all banks, city and county offices and the post office will shut their doors in observance of the holiday.

The Pickaway Plains Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution urges all residents to display the American flag on Friday.

Name Corrected

A name listed on a recent land transfer was reported in error. The notice should have read: Fairfield Homes, Inc., a corporation, to Joseph Barton and Joyce Arlene Sweazy; lot 55 (Bloomdale addition).

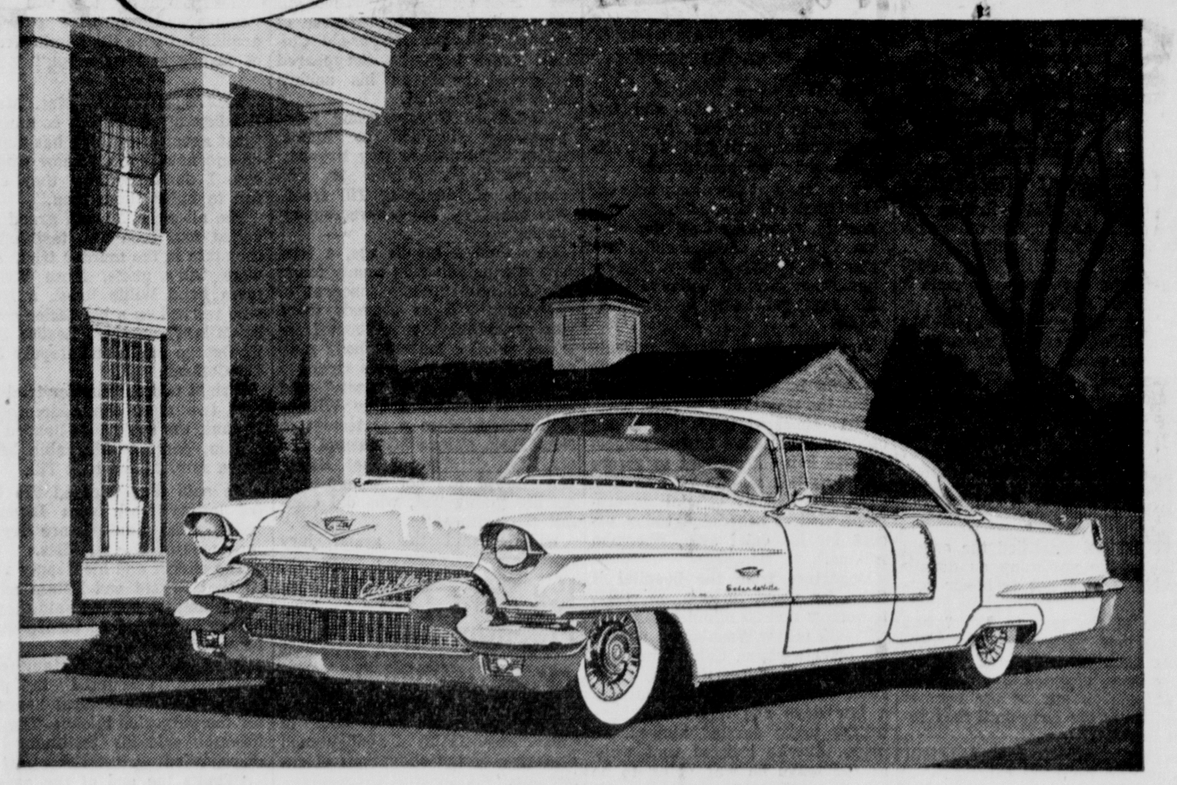
Cadillac



Beyond the Realm of Argument!

This is the season when conversations turn easily and often to motor cars.

And, in almost any gathering, you're likely to find a wide difference of opinion about the relative merits of the year's automotive offerings.

Until the talk turns to Cadillac!

Here is one car concerning which most motorists have a meeting of minds. And never before has Cadillac left so little room for argument as in 1956!

Certainly no one could behold the new Cadillac without recognizing it as the "car of cars". Its beautiful, graceful, flowing lines . . . its regal bearing on the highway . . . and its long, low silhouette are simply too significant to misunderstand.

Surely no one could ride in a new Cadillac and not agree that it is the Standard of the World. Its new fabrics and leathers are rich and luxurious almost beyond belief . . . and its interior appointments have been crafted with a jeweler's skill.

And we doubt if anyone could drive a new Cadillac and not understand that it is the finest-performing motor car of all time. Its great new engine is a revelation in power and performance . . . and its new Hydra-Matic Drive is incredibly smooth and responsive.

Truly, the evidence on the side of Cadillac has never been more apparent than it is today.

Why not come in soon—and see for yourself?

We'll be delighted to introduce you to Cadillac's great new styling . . . and to arrange a demonstration at the wheel . . . and to acquaint you with the new Sedan de Ville and Eldorado Seville.

You'll agree, we're certain, that Cadillac for 1956 is beyond the realm of argument!

FARM NEWS

County Agent

STATE DAIRY CATTLE TO SELL: Pickaway County dairymen may be interested in learning that 65 head of purebred dairy cattle, bred and developed at Ohio State University, will be put on the auction block on Saturday, December 3, starting at 1 p. m. The animals are being offered due to a high percentage of heifer calfs being born to this herd during the last two years, and the animals cannot be kept in the herd. For further information farmers are requested to write to the Department of Dairy Science, Ohio State University, Columbus 10.

RODENT CONTROL: October and November are the times of year in Pickaway County when rats and mice forsake their Summer homes in fields, along roadways and other open places and move to the security offered by buildings. They make no discrimination as to the kind of building, be it a house, barn, business or industrial building. Once inside they cause severe damage in many cases.

Two poisons which have become familiar during the past few years are still very effective in the control of rats and mice. They are "Warfarine" and "Pival'. A new poison, which has recently been introduced known as "Fermarine", has recently been granted registration by the USDA. It will sell to formulators under the trade name "Ratafin 22" by the manufacturer. The action in this poison is similar to "Warfarine' and "Pival' 'and is used in bates at the same concentration. It has the same effect of being an anti-coagulant.

GRAIN STORAGE: Farmers who are storing wheat on their own places must make doubly sure that the wheat is kept in good condition. According to a recent announcement by the Food and Drug Administration, the amount of foreign material allowed per pint of wheat will be less than previous effective July 1, 1956. This will, of course, apply to this year's crop which has not been sold as well as the 1956 crop.

NEW WORM TREATMENT FOR HOGS: A chemical called "Piperazine" has recently been put on the market for the treatment of hogs and worms. The manufacturer claims that the material is 95 to 100 percent effective against large round worms, and 85 percent effective against modular worms.

It can be mixed in wet or dry feed and the toxsisty of the material is low. It can be fed to 30 pound pigs and over. It is tasteless and is fed in four pounds of the daily feed ration after hogs have been off feed for 12 to 14 hours. It is necessary to keep pigs off feed 8 hours after feed is given them.

According to research by Dr. A. C. Todd, of Wisconsin, it is effective in narcoticing the worms which will be expelled alive. In other words, dead worms will not be digested and absorbed into the blood stream.

Samples of the material are available at our office for demonstration purposes.

FALL CORN BORER SURVEY: According to an entomologist at Ohio State University, the corn borer count for Pickaway County is down considerably as compared to 1954. The count for 1955 was an average of 73 borers per 100 plants as compared to 186 last year. This is a drop of over 200 percent.

If this trend continues, the corn borer will not be a serious pest in Pickaway County cornfields. The state average for 1954 was 153 borers per 100 plants and 124 for 1955.

FERTILIZE YOUR LAWN: The application of one or two pounds of a balanced fertilizer per 100 square feet of lawn at this time will pay dividends in increased lawn growth next year. Home owners are advised to use a mixture such as 3-12-12, 4-16-16, or 5-20-20. If the lawn has been very poor it might pay to have a soil sample taken. Samples may be brought to this office at any time during office hours.

OHIO FARMERS MORE PRODUCTIVE: I think one point which agriculture should get across to the public is the fact that a large part of this nation's high standard of living is due to the high production per worker in agriculture.

Today, for each farm worker now on an Ohio farm there are between six and seven families, totaling 25 persons, who are fed on what he produces. At the present time, the farm population of Ohio is only 11 percent of the total. That figures for the United States is approximately 13 percent.

Today, tractors do the work of 10 horses, five plows and five men. The farmer of today must be a chemist, an engineer, an accountant and a research analyist in addition to taking care of his crops and livestock.

United States Marines first were called Devil Dogs by the Germans in 1918.

When you are using cooked giblets in a poultry stuffing or gravy, or in a sandwich spread, be sure to cut away the cartilage or gristle from the gizzard.

It can be mixed in wet or dry feed and the toxsisty of the material is low. It can be fed to 30 pound pigs and over. It is tasteless and is fed in four pounds of the daily feed ration after hogs have been off feed for 12 to 14 hours. It is necessary to keep pigs off feed 8 hours after feed is given them.

According to research by Dr. A. C. Todd, of Wisconsin, it is effective in narcoticing the worms which will be expelled alive. In other words, dead worms will not be digested and absorbed into the blood stream.

Samples of the material are available at our office for demonstration purposes.

FALL CORN BORER SURVEY: According to an entomologist at Ohio State University, the corn borer count for Pickaway County is down considerably as compared to 1954. The count for 1955 was an average of 73 borers per 100 plants as compared to 186 last year. This is a drop of over 200 percent.

If this trend continues, the corn borer will not be a serious pest in Pickaway County cornfields. The state average for 1954 was 153 borers per 100 plants and 124 for 1955.

FERTILIZE YOUR LAWN: The application of one or two pounds of a balanced fertilizer per 100 square feet of lawn at this time will pay dividends in increased lawn growth next year. Home owners are advised to use a mixture such as 3-12-12, 4-16-16, or 5-20-20. If the lawn has been very poor it might pay to have a soil sample taken. Samples may be brought to this office at any time during office hours.

OHIO FARMERS MORE PRODUCTIVE: I think one point which agriculture should get across to the public is the fact that a large part of this nation's high standard of living is due to the high production per worker in agriculture.

Today, for each farm worker now on an Ohio farm there are between six and seven families, totaling 25 persons, who are fed on what he produces. At the present time, the farm population of Ohio is only 11 percent of the total. That figures for the United States is approximately 13 percent.

Today, tractors do the work of 10 horses, five plows and five men. The farmer of today must be a chemist, an engineer, an accountant and a research analysist in addition to taking care of his crops and livestock.

United States Marines first were called Devil Dogs by the Germans in 1918.

When you are using cooked giblets in a poultry stuffing or gravy, or in a sandwich spread, be sure to cut away the cartilage or gristle from the gizzard.

"Mary Haworth's Mail"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I love my husband very dearly, even though I deserted him, and am now living alone, very unhappily. I have a young daughter, and am in my early forties and Zeke is approaching this age.

I had been a widow for two years before we met, and I fell madely in love with and married him. I had no illusions about him. I knew his past and knew that he drank, and all I expected of marriage was mutual love. I wanted companionship, and the feeling of belonging, and having someone who belonged to me. My greatest happiness was in making him happy. I am lost without him.

Why did I leave him? Because twice, when in a drunken rage, he beat me unmercifully, for no reason at all, I feared for my life, not for myself, but because of my responsibility to my daughter.

Alcohol His Weakness

When over his binges, he is sorry for what he did, I know; and I also know that he would like to make up with me, but his pride won't let him admit it. Right now he has a chip on his shoulder (as all alcoholics do), and it gives him renewed excuse for drinking. Because I walked out on him, he won't see me or listen to me.

How can I appeal to him, so that he might change? He has the makings of a wonderful person, but alcohol is his weakness and he denies that he needs help. I live in fear of what may happen to him in the future if he persists in living without me and continues his abnormal drinking.

He is locked within himself. Trying to talk to him is like beating against a stone wall.

T. F.

DEAR T. F.: The gist of your letter is that you yearn to restore communication with Zeke, and you hope this column will open the door. But I think it would be a self-destructive course, potentially, were you to force your way back to him at this point — with nothing changed for the better, in your character or his.

Obviously you are obsessively attracted to Zeke, in a sexually hypnotized, morbidly neurotic kind of enslavement. And it seems he resents your dependency bias and fights your possessive mother-love, in a cruelly demoralized way. He is a bad influence over you, just as you are a bad influence on him —each aggravating pre - existing emotional disorders in the other, apparently.

Your wild infatuation for Zeke, and compulsion to bellycrawl back to him now, after having fled for your life, suggests that you've been involved in a sadist-masochist type of exchange. In scornfully leaving you out in the cold, when at heart he might relish reconciliation, Zeke is running true to form being a sadist. He is adding insult to injury, intensifying and prolonging your suffering, playing a cat-and-mouse game with you, just because your actions tell him he can.

Objective View

As I see the picture, there are two problems here. One is your sick personality, and terrified assumption of need to belong to Zeke for security. The other is Zeke's alcoholism and moral cussedness.

Your primary duty in the circumstances is to pull yourself together, where you are, and get psychiatric and spiritual help in coming out of the emotional bog which you call "love."

As for Zeke's jeopardy, there is no use trying to rescue him, until he is open to help and cooperative. And even then, he will pose a problem for specialists. He is too mixed-up, within himself, for you to reach or lift or guide him.

Now is the time for consumers and shoppers to get better acquainted with pork—the pig as well as the hog.

Pork has been used for food since the beginning of time. It is well known as the feasting highlight for times of special rejoicing. A Chinese legend, according to Charles Lamb, tells of the origin of roast pork in the accidental death of a pig in a burning house.

An old rustic custom of Lorraine relates to butchering time events having nothing to do with food or eating. The daughter of the house sent to her betrothed the foot of the pig tied up with blue ribbons and bay leaves as a symbol of her love. On the other hand, if she wished to indicate her lack of interest, she sent the tail of the pig tied up with a pickle, the symbol of indifference and mockery.

A USDA bulletin tells us that between 1815 and 1830 Ohio was the center for hog raising. By 1850, Cincinnati, well located for water transportation, was the most important center for pork packing and was known as "Porkopolis".

* * *

SO AT THIS point in 1955, before we start thinking too strongly turkey-wise, "Let's All Go Shopping" for pork. Pigs and hogs go into the packing plant in one piece but leave in as many as 80 different pork products. Therefore, the shopping list need not get into a rib or chop rut! This week, pork loins, bacon and hams are listed among the items for which the budget conscious shopper should look.

Hog prices recently worked down to a new low level for the last 13 years. Research reports show that there are about 11 pigs on the market this year for every 10 that came to market last year. When 1955 has gone down in history, 71 million hogs will have gone to market.

A recent extension "Econogram" states that a pork and lard purchase program is being undertaken by the USDA to encourage additional consumption of pork to assist farmers in adjusting their production to market demand. Current low prices of lard are encouraging exports —indications are that domestic production will continue to increase.

In this modern age we no longer go "to market, to market, to buy a fat hog"—an antique nursery rhyme. Emphasis is now being put on the production of what farmers and meat packers call the "meat type" hog. These animals have less fat and a much higher proportion of lean meat than hogs produced only a few years ago. As Ray Anderson stated in a recent farm magazine, "An honest meat-type hog is one that will cut out around 50 percent in the lean cuts and will reach a 225-pound market weight in six months or less."

The quality of meat is determined by the difference in feeding the animal. Hogs fed on corn and alfalfa yield a firm carcass. The flesh is pink and fine grained, the fat firm and white and the cuts trim out cleanly. The hams have a proper depth of fat and flesh.

* * *

HOGS FED on slops, nuts and acorns yield a soft carcass that no amount of chilling will firm. The fat is flabby and brownish and the flesh lacks firmness and fine grain.

Four characteristics of good pork are:

Skin—smooth, white, thin and flexible;

Fat—firm and white and evenly distributed over the body;

Flesh — fine grained, bright light red in color and firm in texture;

Bones—small in size, red and soft.

Three points in wise pork buying are:

(1) Compare the price of the different cuts of pork and select those that have a large proportion of edible meat in relation to fat and bone for the money;

(2) Consider how it will be prepared;

(3) Buy the cut that best serves the need.

SEVERAL miscellaneous yet important pork facts are:

There will be approximately 66 pounds of pork per person on hand this year.

Remove store wrapping immediately when you get home and cover loosely with wax paper for storing in the refrigerator.

Plan to use fresh pork within a few days and if frozen it should not be kept in storage more than six months.

Pork is especially valuable for thiamine (a 3 ounce serving of ham, without bone, may furnish as much as a third of the recommended daily allowance).

* * *

PORK LIVER contains the highest percentage of iron of any liver and is especially high in thiamine. For this reason, as well as its generally lower price, it is the most economical buy in liver.

All pork should be cooked until well done.

Put with either the loins or hams or bacon a selection of the excellent quality sweet potatoes now on the counters in most Ohio food stores. Add a raw cranberry salad, serve pumpkin pie for dessert and the homemaker can be credited with not only an economical meal but also one for which her family will be most enthusiastic.

PUCO Studying Freight Rates

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio is studying a request by 10 railroads to make temporary freight rate increases permanent.

Coal interests are opposing the request. The temporary increases expire the end of this year. The rates apply only to shipments made inside Ohio.

Industry Due To Get Air Force Secrets

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—The way was cleared today for releasing top Air Force secrets to selected industries in an effort to spur technical advances.

Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Bryan Jr., commander of the Wright Air Development Center here, disclosed the Air Force plan last night in a talk before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

After commenting on Russia's "growing technical capability" and attempts "to overtake us in air power," Bryan said:

"The scope of the technical job ahead is such that it demands no less than the concentrated contribution of every element of the Air Force-science-industry team."

Bryan said the Air Research and Development Command (ARDC) in Baltimore will release secrets to selected industries through technical documents.

The documents, covering 46 areas, will tell of the Air Force's military job 10-15 years hence; evaluate present technical capabilities; offer research summaries, proposed innovations and suggestions; and specify desired objectives.

Bryan said 104 Air Force contractors will be given information relative to their field as the first step. Next, a second list of contractors will be given planning documents. Finally, the ARDC "will receive queries and requests from potential sources not now Air Force contractors."

The new program will be explained to aircraft industry suppliers at symposiums in seven cities across the country, Bryan said. The first symposium already has been held in New York City. The next is scheduled for Cleveland in January. Other cities were not announced.

Retail Chief Named

COLUMBUS (AP)—Thomas Wiseman of Lancaster has been named president of the Ohio State Council of Retail Merchants at its annual meeting here.

Weekly Food Review

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lower prices on a wide selection of meats will be offered by the nation's food stores this weekend.

Generally, beef and pork prices continue at around the lower levels reached in recent weeks. A number of stores will be offering smoked hams at marked down prices, and there will be specials on loins of pork, a favorite Sunday dinner item.

Chuck roast will be cheaper in many markets and some will trim pricetags on round steak or roast, prime ribs and porterhouse steak.

Frying chickens will be popular feature, with unusually low prices posted in some areas.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture passed the word along this week that your Thanksgiving turkey will cost two to six cents a pound more this year than in 1954. The reasons: A smaller crop and later marketing.

Egg prices generally will be lower this weekend, with reductions ranging from one to four cents a dozen. Butter shows little price change.

From the produce men comes word that beets, potatoes, onions, turnips, radishes and cabbage are outstanding buys this week.

Let's All Go Shopping!

By MRS LEORA SAYRE

Now is the time for consumers and shoppers to get better acquainted with pork—the pig as well as the hog.

Pork has been used for food since the beginning of time. It is well known as the feasting highlight for times of special rejoicing. A Chinese legend, according to Charles Lamb, tells of the origin of roast pork in the accidental death of a pig in a burning house.

An old rustic custom of Lorraine relates to butchering time events having nothing to do with food or eating. The daughter of the house sent to her betrothed the foot of the pig tied up with a blue ribbons and bay leaves as a symbol of her love. On the other hand, if she wished to indicate her lack of interest, she sent the tail of the pig tied up with a pickle, the symbol of indifference and mockery.

A USDA bulletin tells us that between 1815 and 1830 Ohio was the center for hog raising. By 1850, Cincinnati, well located for water transportation, was the most important center for pork packing and was known as "Porkopolis".

* * *

SO AT THIS point in 1955, before we start thinking too strongly turkey-wise, "Let's All Go Shopping" for pork. Pigs and hogs go into the packing plant in one piece but leave in as many as 80 different pork products. Therefore, the shopping list need not get into a rib or chop rut! This week, pork loins, bacon and hams are listed among the items for which the budget conscious shopper should look.

Hog prices recently worked down to a new low level for the last 13 years. Research reports show that there are about 11 pigs on the market this year for every 10 that came to market last year. When 1955 has gone down in history, 71 million hogs will have gone to market.

A recent extension "Econogram" states that a pork and lard purchase program is being undertaken by the USDA to encourage additional consumption of pork to assist farmers in adjusting their production to market demand. Current low prices of lard are encouraging exports —indications are that domestic production will continue to increase.

In this modern age we no longer go "to market, to market, to buy a fat hog"—an antique nursery rhyme. Emphasis is now being put on the production of what farmers and meat packers call the "meat type" hog. These animals have less fat and a much higher proportion of lean meat than hogs produced only a few years ago. As Ray Anderson stated in a recent farm magazine, "An honest meat-type hog is one that will cut out around 50 percent in the lean cuts and will reach a 225-pound market weight in six months or less."

The quality of meat is determined by the difference in feeding the animal. Hogs fed on corn and alfalfa yield a firm carcass. The flesh is pink and fine grained, the fat firm and white and the cuts trim out cleanly. The hams have a proper depth of fat and flesh.

* * *

HOGS FED on slops, nuts and acorns yield a soft carcass that no amount of chilling will firm. The fat is flabby and brownish and the flesh lacks firmness and fine grain.

Four characteristics of good pork are:

Skin—smooth, white, thin and flexible;

Fat—firm and white and evenly distributed over the body;

Flesh — fine grained, bright light red in color and firm in texture;

Bones—small in size, red and soft.

Three points in wise pork buying are:

(1) Compare the price of the different cuts of pork and select those that have a large proportion of edible meat in relation to fat and bone for the money;

(2) Consider how it will be prepared;

(3) Buy the cut that best serves the need.

SEVERAL miscellaneous yet important pork facts are:

There will be approximately 66 pounds of pork per person on hand this year.

Remove store wrapping immediately when you get home and cover loosely with wax paper for storing in the refrigerator.

Plan to use fresh pork within a few days and if frozen it should not be kept in storage more than six months.

Pork is especially valuable for thiamine (a 3 ounce serving of ham, without bone, may furnish as much as a third of the recommended daily allowance).

* * *

PORK LIVER contains the highest percentage of iron of any liver and is especially high in thiamine. For this reason, as well as its generally lower price, it is the most economical buy in liver.

All pork should be cooked until well done.

Put with either the loins or hams or bacon a selection of the excellent quality sweet potatoes now on the counters in most Ohio food stores. Add a raw cranberry salad, serve pumpkin pie for dessert and the homemaker can be credited with not only an economical meal but also one for which her family will be most enthusiastic.

PUCO Studying Freight Rates

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio is studying a request by 10 railroads to make temporary freight rate increases permanent.

Coal interests are opposing the request. The temporary increases expire the end of this year. The rates apply only to shipments made inside Ohio.

Industry Due To Get Air Force Secrets

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—The way was cleared today for releasing top Air Force secrets to selected industries in an effort to spur technical advances.

Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Bryan Jr., commander of the Wright Air Development Center here, disclosed the Air Force plan last night in a talk before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

After commenting on Russia's "growing technical capability" and attempts "to overtake us in air power," Bryan said:

"The scope of the technical job ahead is such that it demands no less than the concentrated contribution of every element of the Air Force-science-industry team."

Bryan said the Air Research and Development Command (ARDC) in Baltimore will release secrets to selected industries through technical documents.

The documents, covering 46 areas, will tell of the Air Force's military job 10-15 years hence; evaluate present technical capabilities; offer research summaries, proposed innovations and suggestions; and specify desired objectives.

Bryan said 104 Air Force contractors will be given information relative to their field as the first step. Next, a second list of contractors will be given planning documents. Finally, the ARDC "will receive queries and requests from potential sources not now Air Force contractors."

The new program will be explained to aircraft industry suppliers at symposiums in seven cities across the country, Bryan said. The first symposium already has been held in New York City. The next is scheduled for Cleveland in January. Other cities were not announced.

Weekly Food Review

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lower prices on a wide selection of meats will be offered by the nation's food stores this weekend.

Generally, beef and pork prices continue at around the lower levels reached in recent weeks. A number of stores will be offering smoked hams at marked down prices, and there will be specials on loins of pork, a favorite Sunday dinner item.

Chuck roast will be cheaper in many markets and some will trim pricetags on round steak or roast, prime ribs and porterhouse steak.

Frying chickens will be popular feature, with unusually low prices posted in some areas.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture passed the word along this week that your Thanksgiving turkey will cost two to six cents a pound more this year than in 1954. The reasons: A smaller crop and later marketing.

Egg prices generally will be lower this weekend, with reductions ranging from one to four cents a dozen. Butter shows little price change.

From the produce men comes word that beets, potatoes, onions, turnips, radishes and cabbage are outstanding buys this week.

GENEROUS OFFER

THE UNITED STATES has offered to set up an atomic reactor center in South and Southeast Asia for nuclear research and training under the atoms-for-peace program.

This announcement was made recently at the meeting in Singapore of the nations belonging to the Colombo Plan. This is an organization dedicated to helping South and Southeast Asian nations develop economically.

Countries benefiting under the Colombo Plan include Burma, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Malaya, British Borneo, Nepal, Pakistan, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. This is the heart of the "brown" world and an area that has been "kicking up its heels" politically.

The plan is for the U. S. to contribute funds for training Asians, building laboratory facilities and buying equipment. But the actual establishment of the center and staffing of it would be by Colombo Plan nations themselves.

It behooves American overseas broadcasts and publications to make the most of this proposal. For this is an instance of America offering to help former colonies pull themselves up by their bootstraps.

The Soviets undoubtedly will try to make "imperialism" out of this. But the Asians themselves will not be fooled if they see American generosity bearing fruit of better living for their peoples.

POWER BID DANGERS

SEVERAL INFLUENTIAL voices in organized labor have been raised against the drive toward dominant political and economic power by the big unions. The warning is that the unions aren't as strong as the general public. The public will rise and smack the unions down if they achieve a power arrogance.

Now comes George Q. Lynch, president of the Patternmakers League, a union of 14,000 skilled craftsmen. He doesn't like the implications of the AFL-CIO merger into one giant organization. The rank and file of union members aren't getting the full story, he asserts.

They hear the old argument that in union there is strength. But they have been given little enough of the idea that bigness means concentration of power. And concentration of power is accomplished by inevitable abuses which finally are penalized in a democracy.

America has preserved its freedoms by taking in hand those who aspire to overwhelming power. It will always be that way. Those who think in terms of overwhelming power just haven't learned their lessons.

Some of the names that crop up in the foreign news seem like propaganda for a universal language.

Weather Bureau has 15,000 terms describing weather conditions. Its biggest trouble is finding the right one to use in advance.

Viewing bulging schoolhouses, it is surprising to recall that race suicide was once feared in this country.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Republicans are annoyed with the Democrats because Congressional Committees, now chaired by Democrats, are investigating Republican conduct in office and are seeking for corruption and other derelictions. What do they expect?

For many years, during the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations, the Republicans said that if they ever reached power, they would investigate the Democrats to prove corruption and subversion. In fact, the 1952 campaign was fought out on this issue. Republicans accused Democrats of being corrupt and soft on Communists and other subversives.

When some Republican members of Congress took these Republican charges seriously and began investigations, they were called off by the White House. Senators McCarthy and Jenner declined to be called off and both were disciplined by the White House. What might have been great usefulness to their party was reduced to a trickle of opposition.

The terms on which McCarthy might have made his peace with the White House were these: His Committee would continue to investigate, but hearings were to be held only in Executive Session; McCarthy was then to send the transcript to the White House which would determine what action, if any, would be taken. McCarthy rejected this proposal.

And now the Democrats are investigating the Republicans and have as must have been expected, hit some pay-dirt because there always is some in a large, sprawling Administration whether Republican or Democratic.

The essential error in the political thinking that motivated the White House was the assumption that because President Eisenhower is unusually popular, the Democrats would let the 1956 campaign go by default. Even if every Democrat wants President Eisenhower to continue in office, under our two-party system, which is essentially sound, it is necessary for each party to go through with a campaign and it is wholesome for the country if the opposition opposes. A one-party system can only produce a tyranny and bi-partisanship deprives the people of the advantage of debate.

The Democrats therefore are right in proceeding with their investigations. When the Republicans were in power, they contended that "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition," as they used the phrase, owes it to the country to examine, investigate, scrutinize, debate, and dispute the policies and activities of the party in power.

What needs to be emphasized, if this country is to survive as a Republic, is that men count for little but that institutions are important. Men are elected and defeated; they emerge as energetic youngsters and settle down to be tired, uninspired middle-aged public officials whose greatest concern is that they will have to return to obscurity. Some even die in office. But the institutions remain.

Therein is our strength because we do not have to fear the disappearance of great men. We have no Hitlers, Stalins or Titoes in our political life. We do have a Constitution which has outlasted 34 Presidents and 84 Congresses.

The Congressional Committee is useful because each is a watchdog of Executive conduct. Most of their powers to investigate really derive from the control of the purse by the Congress. When Congress votes funds to any Executive agency, it is entitled to know what the appropriation is for, how the money is to be spent, and whether the officials who spend the money do it efficiently, honestly and according to the intention of Congress.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

LOIS was still at Albert's and Bessie's cottage when Dr. Thomas arrived. In the interval Jane had talked in a low tone to Clyde. The doctor looked around, his brows shooting up when he saw the first Mrs. Brindle.

"Well, Jane, good to see you. I heard you had come back. Planning to stay long?"

"Just a visit," she said.

He studied Clyde, a puzzled, speculative frown between his brows, and shot a sharp glance at Lois. Stirring things up, his expression said clearly. He was beaming when Bessie opened the bedroom door and came out.

"Well, Bessie, what's the trouble here? Tell Doc all about it."

Bessie's face was ravaged. "Albert is in a state of collapse. His heart is racing and he's an awful color. Like death. I can't understand it when he just lies there. What tires him so? And he keeps his door shut as though—as though we were to blame for—what happened."

"Anything special upset him?"

"Nothing reasonable," Bessie said. "He was talking to Mrs. Fleming when—"

The doctor turned to Lois and seemed about to speak. Then he picked up his bag, went into the bedroom and closed the door. After a few moments he opened it again.

"Need someone to give me a hand," he said and Clyde followed him into the bedroom. Almost immediately the boy came out.

"What was it?" his mother asked.

"I don't know. Dad—didn't want me around."

The color drained out of Bessie's face. Awkwardly she put her hand on his arm. "He's just sick, Clyde. Sick people are apt to get fancies."

He summoned up a smile that did not succeed in concealing his hurt. "Let's face it. Dad doesn't seem to like me very much."

Something broke in Bessie's face. "He does too like you," she said fiercely. "Anyone would like you. There's not a kinder, more considerate, sweeter-tempered boy—"

Clyde patted her head. "All right, Mom, skip it. If I can't do anything here—" he went out of the cottage, shoulders bent, a big, ungainly, slouching figure stamped with defeat.

"It's not fair," Bessie cried, "for Roger always to come ahead of Clyde. It's enough to make the boy bitter and—"

Jane dropped into a chair and lighted a cigaret. "You know, Bessie, there are times when I grow weary of having Roger blamed for everything that goes wrong. After all, Clyde owes him a great deal."

Bessie looked at her, opened her lips, did not speak. She smoothed down her apron with fingers that shook.

"And you've got a lot to answer for yourself, Bessie," Jane went on. "If Albert put Roger first, you've put Albert first. If any boy ever had to be satisfied with leftovers it's Clyde. And he is like his father in a lot of ways. You might think of that. Enormously like him."

Bessie's lips quivered and she pressed them hard together. For the first time Jane's face revealed neither compassion nor tolerance and Bessie seemed visibly to cower, shrinking from the woman who had been her lifelong friend.

Jane added abruptly, "Do you love the boy?"

Lois was paralyzed with embarrassment. This was the second time within an hour she had become involved in an intimate scene.

"Yes," Bessie said, choking. "Oh, yes! I guess I have kind of neglected him; I guess I have a lot of arrears of love to make up to him, but I do love him, Jane."

"Then, why not let him know it before it's too late," Jane said fiercely.

Dr. Thomas came out of the bedroom. "I've given Albert a hypodermic. He's asleep for awhile. But don't let anything get him excited again." He spoke to Bessie but his eyes were on Lois. He shifted them to Jane. "And don't you make another attempt to see him, Jane. Doc's orders. I don't know what you are up to but ever since you reached Stoweville there's been gossip. You're trying your best to blacken the name of the finest man God ever made and I'm not going to let you do it."

Again Lois was conscious of the strong core of serenity in Jane's nature. Her strong hands were clasped loosely in her lap. Her big mouth had lost its lines of humor.

"I came to Stoweville," she said quietly, "to find the answer to a question. I won't be driven out until I find it."

"And what's the question?"

"Who turned on the gas heater in Roger's cottage the night he died."

"Roger," Doc said distinctly, "died of a heart attack in his own bedroom."

"Nothing of the sort," Jane said briskly, almost impersonally. "I know where he died and how. And I'm in this to the end. I'll fight if I have to."

There was no mistaking her intentions. Doc Thomas studied her, thinking hard. Then he flung out his arms in a gesture of surrender.

"I don't know why you are doing this, Jane; why you couldn't let Roger rest in peace. But if you've got to know the truth, I'll tell you. I've tried my best to protect his reputation. But if you want to smear him, I suppose you won't be satisfied until you succeed. Roger did it himself."

The thought that plagued Lois as she walked along the path concerned her own responsibility in the matter. Had Roger Brindle taken his own life, as Dr. Thomas declared; or had he been murdered, as Shandy Stowe believed?

If it was murder she had the responsibility of any decent citizen. She couldn't sidestep it. If you believed in anything at all, you had to believe that a killer must be stopped.

But why would anyone want to kill Roger Brindle, America's best-loved man; the man who, according to everyone, devoted his energies to trying to give people what they wanted. It was not for profit. No one gained financially; even his wife had been left almost without resources; and the people whom he had sheltered, as a stalwart tree shelters plants and vines, were left destitute. In a very real sense, everyone had lost by his death.

The crime itself was fiendishly clever because of its very simplicity. No clue. No weapon. A gas fireplace turned on. But why hadn't Roger noticed the odor of escaping gas? Even Doc Thomas could hardly have covered up a head injury if Roger had been knocked unconscious before the murder.

Lois shut her eyes to help her concentrate. Two nights before Roger's death an attempt had been made to shoot him. And no one had made any reference to the bullet hole through the windowpane. A fantastic conspiracy of silence. Two nights later someone had tried again. And succeeded. Not an impulsive crime, not the result of a moment of emotional storm. A patient business.

No one whom Lois could put a finger on could possibly have killed Roger.

Perhaps Dr. Thomas was right and Roger had killed himself. Certainly there was the internal evidence of his column, of his fatigue, of his loss of faith in his world; there was Jane's evidence of his depression, his secret drinking.

But someone had shot at him two nights before, shot at him with Shandy's missing gun. That was evidence that could not be argued away. Evidence of intention to kill.

(To Be Continued)

You're Telling Me!

By WILLIAM RITT

New edition of Jane's Fighting Ships, the Who's Who among world navies, reports the Russians have 400 submarines and are building 100 more. Wonder if they'll name one of the new subs the "Geneva Spirit"?

A small Michigan railroad complains it carried but two passengers this year. Maybe it was the same guy going round trip.

A Canadian student won his college's beer-drinking championship by downing 64 glasses of the stuff in 12 hours. Gulp!

A newspaper item reveals that the average human body contains some 10 quadrillion atoms. This may explain why, when the Little Woman blows her stack, the explosion is so terrific.

A pickpocket stole the $15 robbed from a Montreal store by another thief. Sometimes a guy can't lay up a crooked dollar!

A Vancouver boy found a 10-inch-square 10-pound tooth of an ancient mammoth. Make a dandy sign for some dentist.

Big fruit growing and distributing combine announces the orange crate will be replaced with a cardboard box. Good grief! — what'll newlyweds use for a dining room table?

Among the early Greeks, the punishment of a murderer was the duty and privilege of the victim's relatives.

Max Woods of Circleville has been elected new commander of the Circleville Amvets Post.

Carl D. Bennett, principal of Darby Township High School, has been elected secretary-treasurer of the Pickaway County Honor Society.

Recovery of a stolen automobile belonging to Maynard Warner, 144 W. High St., by the Glouchester police has been reported to the Circleville police.

Votes in both precincts of Ashville will be up for recount Monday night in the election board office to decide the hotly-contested mayor's race there.

Try, Stop Me

Governor "Soapy" Williams of Michigan tells of an evening in Lansing when a gent very much under the influence eluded the guards and begged, "Hey, Guv, what time ya got?"

"It's exactly 9:30 p. m.," the "Guv" told him.

"I must be going nuts," wailed the imbiber. "All day long I keep getting different answers!"

A city man bought a country estate and also an ornate weather vane to put on top of the barn. It was much too elaborate for the flimsy structure, however, and the man's wife brought it back for exchange.

"I'm afraid," she explained to the man who had fashioned it, "you'll have to give us something in a lighter vane."

Have you heard about the man from outer space who changed saucers in mid-stream?

Gotham Enjoys Its Viruses

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Everytime an Eskimo visits Manhattan and opens his mouth to comment, the first thing he says is:

"Katchoo-o-o!"

This isn't a form of polar greeting. It is just a sign (sure as sneezing!) the fellow is coming down with a virus.

Happens with every touring Eskimo. Let him take one look at the subway and before he can even brag they got better looking igloos above ground back home, down he comes with the sniffles.

The people who come here to admire the skyscrapers in our town remain to enjoy our viruses. As a matter of fact the residents here no longer boast about the skyscrapers. That is taken as rather early century talk.

Your real true-blue New Yorker, full of civic pride, would rather dwell on less well known virtues of our spreading cosmopolitan community.

We particularly excel in civilized diseases and uncivilized weather.

In the size of ulcers we don't claim we outmatch Hollywood. All we say is that we've got more of them. And we have fellows who go on a diet themselves but continue to feed their ulcers three square meals a day.

Other cities now and then call attention to an epidemic virus, but here we've got so many viruses we name them after the month. A showoff right now is a fellow who claims he's got an April virus in November.

Take a virus away from a New Yorker this time of year and what have you got left? Only a guy with a lonesome feeling. A virus is more than a form of social prestige here. It's a social necessity.

The common cold is highly uncommon in New York. A gent who isn't fast enough to latch on to a virus is expected to stay healthy.

Now about our uncivilized weather. Other cities enjoy a climate. We don't really have a climate. We have a series of used up and discarded weathers from other areas.

It is possible to find seven different kinds of weather in San Francisco on an average day. But what does San Francisco do with all its weathers when it is through with them? It stirs a wind and blows them here.

So does Canada. So does the Mid West. So does Florida. So does Europe. This is the world's melting ground of weathers.

Maybe Tucson, Ariz., can fry an egg on the pavement during a heat wave. We can't do that. The humidity won't allow it. But we can bust an egg on the sidewalk and soft boil it. Can any other city honestly make this claim?

Smog? We mail our surplus to Los Angeles.

If you come here from out of town and get homesick for your favorite virus or favorite weather, don't complain. Wet your finger and hold it up. Good or bad, a wind will blow it this way soon. Everything blows to New York City.

GENEROUS OFFER

THE UNITED STATES has offered to set up an atomic reactor center in South and Southeast Asia for nuclear research and training under the atoms-for-peace program.

This announcement was made recently at the meeting in Singapore of the nations belonging to the Colombo Plan. This is an organization dedicated to helping South and Southeast Asian nations develop economically.

Countries benefiting under the Colombo Plan include Burma, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Malaya, British Borneo, Nepal, Pakistan, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. This is the heart of the "brown" world and an area that has been "kicking up its heels" politically.

The plan is for the U. S. to contribute funds for training Asians, building laboratory facilities and buying equipment. But the actual establishment of the center and staffing of it would be by Colombo Plan nations themselves.

It behooves American overseas broadcasts and publications to make the most of this proposal. For this is an instance of America offering to help former colonies pull themselves up by their bootstraps.

The Soviets undoubtedly will try to make "imperialism" out of this. But the Asians themselves will not be fooled if they see American generosity bearing fruit of better living for their peoples.

POWER BID DANGERS

SEVERAL INFLUENTIAL voices in organized labor have been raised against the drive toward dominant political and economic power by the big unions. The warning is that the unions aren't as strong as the general public. The public will rise and smack the unions down if they achieve a power arrogance.

Now comes George Q. Lynch, president of the Patternmakers League, a union of 14,000 skilled craftsmen. He doesn't like the implications of the AFL-CIO merger into one giant organization. The rank and file of union members aren't getting the full story, he asserts.

They hear the old argument that in union there is strength. But they have been given little enough of the idea that bigness means concentration of power. And concentration of power is accomplished by inevitable abuses which finally are penalized in a democracy.

America has preserved its freedoms by taking in hand those who aspire to overwhelming power. It will always be that way. Those who think in terms of overwhelming power just haven't learned their lessons.

Some of the names that crop up in the foreign news seem like propaganda for a universal language.

Weather Bureau has 15,000 terms describing weather conditions. Its biggest trouble is finding the right one to use in advance.

Viewing bulging schoolhouses, it is surprising to recall that race suicide was once feared in this country.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The Republicans are annoyed with the Democrats because Congressional Committees, now chaired by Democrats, are investigating Republican conduct in office and are seeking for corruption and other derelictions. What do they expect?

For many years, during the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations, the Republicans said that if they ever reached power, they would investigate the Democrats to prove corruption and subversion. In fact, the 1952 campaign was fought out on this issue. Republicans accused Democrats of being corrupt and soft on Communists and other subversives.

When some Republican members of Congress took these Republican charges seriously and began investigations, they were called off by the White House. Senators McCarthy and Jenner declined to be called off and both were disciplined by the White House. What might have been great usefulness to their party was reduced to a trickle of opposition.

The terms on which McCarthy might have made his peace with the White House were these: His Committee would continue to investigate, but hearings were to be held only in Executive Session; McCarthy was then to send the transcript to the White House which would determine what action, if any, would be taken. McCarthy rejected this proposal.

And now the Democrats are investigating the Republicans and have as must have been expected, hit some pay-dirt because there always is some in a large, sprawling Administration whether Republican or Democratic.

The essential error in the political thinking that motivated the White House was the assumption that because President Eisenhower is unusually popular, the Democrats would let the 1956 campaign go by default. Even if every Democrat wants President Eisenhower to continue in office, under our two-party system, which is essentially sound, it is necessary for each party to go through with a campaign and it is wholesome for the country if the opposition opposes. A one-party system can only produce a tyranny and bi-partisanship deprives the people of the advantage of debate.

The Democrats therefore are right in proceeding with their investigations. When the Republicans were in power, they contended that "His Majesty's Loyal Opposition," as they used the phrase, owes it to the country to examine, investigate, scrutinize, debate, and dispute the policies and activities of the party in power.

What needs to be emphasized, if this country is to survive as a Republic, is that men count for little but that institutions are important. Men are elected and defeated; they emerge as energetic youngsters and settle down to be tired, uninspired middle-aged public officials whose greatest concern is that they will have to return to obscurity. Some even die in office. But the institutions remain.

Therein is our strength because we do not have to fear the disappearance of great men. We have no Hitlers, Stalins or Titoes in our political life. We do have a Constitution which has outlasted 34 Presidents and 84 Congresses.

The Congressional Committee is useful because each is a watchdog of Executive conduct. Most of their powers to investigate really derive from the control of the purse by the Congress. When Congress votes funds to any Executive agency, it is entitled to know what the appropriation is for, how the money is to be spent, and whether the officials who spend the money do it efficiently, honestly and according to the intention of Congress.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

LOIS was still at Albert's and Bessie's cottage when Dr. Thomas arrived. In the interval Jane had talked in a low tone to Clyde. The doctor looked around, his brows shooting up when he saw the first Mrs. Brindle.

"Well, Jane, good to see you. I heard you had come back. Planning to stay long?"

"Just a visit," she said.

He studied Clyde, a puzzled, speculative frown between his brows, and shot a sharp glance at Lois. Stirring things up, his expression said clearly. He was beaming when Bessie opened the bedroom door and came out.

"Well, Bessie, what's the trouble here? Tell Doc all about it."

Bessie's face was ravaged. "Albert is in a state of collapse. His heart is racing and he's an awful color. Like death. I can't understand it when he just lies there. What tires him so? And he keeps his door shut as though—as though we were to blame for—what happened."

"Anything special upset him?"

"Nothing reasonable," Bessie said. "He was talking to Mrs. Fleming when—"

The doctor turned to Lois and seemed about to speak. Then he picked up his bag, went into the bedroom and closed the door. After a few moments he opened it again.

"Need someone to give me a hand," he said and Clyde followed him into the bedroom. Almost immediately the boy came out.

"What was it?" his mother asked.

"I don't know. Dad—didn't want me around."

The color drained out of Bessie's face. Awkwardly she put her hand on his arm. "He's just sick, Clyde. Sick people are apt to get fancies."

He summoned up a smile that did not succeed in concealing his hurt. "Let's face it. Dad doesn't seem to like me very much."

Something broke in Bessie's face. "He does too like you," she said fiercely. "Anyone would like you. There's not a kinder, more considerate, sweeter-tempered boy—"

Clyde patted her head. "All right, Mom, skip it. If I can't do anything here—" he went out of the cottage, shoulders bent, a big, ungainly, slouching figure stamped with defeat.

"It's not fair," Bessie cried, "for Roger always to come ahead of Clyde. It's enough to make the boy bitter and—"

Jane dropped into a chair and lighted a cigaret. "You know, Bessie, there are times when I grow weary of having Roger blamed for everything that goes wrong. After all, Clyde owes him a great deal."

Bessie looked at her, opened her lips, did not speak. She smoothed down her apron with fingers that shook.

"And you've got a lot to answer for yourself, Bessie," Jane went on. "If Albert put Roger first, you've put Albert first. If any boy ever had to be satisfied with leftovers it's Clyde. And he is like his father in a lot of ways. You might think of that. Enormously like him."

Bessie's lips quivered and she pressed them hard together. For the first time Jane's face revealed neither compassion nor tolerance and Bessie seemed visibly to cower, shrinking from the woman who had been her lifelong friend.

Jane added abruptly, "Do you love the boy?"

Lois was paralyzed with embarrassment. This was the second time within an hour she had become involved in an intimate scene.

"Yes," Bessie said, choking. "Oh, yes! I guess I have kind of neglected him; I guess I have a lot of arrears of love to make up to him, but I do love him, Jane."

"Then, why not let him know it before it's too late," Jane said fiercely.

Dr. Thomas came out of the bedroom. "I've given Albert a hypodermic. He's asleep for awhile. But don't let anything get him excited again." He spoke to Bessie but his eyes were on Lois. He shifted them to Jane. "And don't you make another attempt to see him, Jane. Doc's orders. I don't know what you are up to but ever since you reached Stoweville there's been gossip. You're trying your best to blacken the name of the finest man God ever made and I'm not going to let you do it."

Again Lois was conscious of the strong core of serenity in Jane's nature. Her strong hands were clasped loosely in her lap. Her big mouth had lost its lines of humor.

"I came to Stoweville," she said quietly, "to find the answer to a question. I won't be driven out until I find it."

"And what's the question?"

"Who turned on the gas heater in Roger's cottage the night he died."

"Roger," Doc said distinctly, "died of a heart attack in his own bedroom."

"Nothing of the sort," Jane said briskly, almost impersonally. "I know where he died and how. And I'm in this to the end. I'll fight if I have to."

There was no mistaking her intentions. Doc Thomas studied her, thinking hard. Then he flung out his arms in a gesture of surrender. "I don't know why you are doing this, Jane; why you couldn't let Roger rest in peace. But if you've got to know the truth, I'll tell you. I've tried my best to protect his reputation. But if you want to smear him, I suppose you won't be satisfied until you succeed. Roger did it himself."

The thought that plagued Lois as she walked along the path concerned her own responsibility in the matter. Had Roger Brindle taken his own life, as Dr. Thomas declared; or had he been murdered, as Shandy Stowe believed?

If it was murder she had the responsibility of any decent citizen. She couldn't sidestep it. If you believed in anything at all, you had to believe that a killer must be stopped.

But why would anyone want to kill Roger Brindle, America's best-loved man; the man who, according to everyone, devoted his energies to trying to give people what they wanted. It was not for profit. No one gained financially; even his wife had been left almost without resources; and the people whom he had sheltered, as a stalwart tree shelters plants and vines, were left destitute. In a very real sense, everyone had lost by his death.

The crime itself was fiendishly clever because of its very simplicity. No clue. No weapon. A gas fireplace turned on. But why hadn't Roger noticed the odor of escaping gas? Even Doc Thomas could hardly have covered up a head injury if Roger had been knocked unconscious before the murder.

Lois shut her eyes to help her concentrate. Two nights before Roger's death an attempt had been made to shoot him. And no one had made any reference to the bullet hole through the windowpane. A fantastic conspiracy of silence. Two nights later someone had tried again. And succeeded. Not an impulsive crime, not the result of a moment of emotional storm. A patient business.

No one whom Lois could put a finger on could possibly have killed Roger.

Perhaps Dr. Thomas was right and Roger had killed himself. Certainly there was the internal evidence of his column, of his fatigue, of his loss of faith in his world; there was Jane's evidence of his depression, his secret drinking.

But someone had shot at him two nights before, shot at him with Shandy's missing gun. That was evidence that could not be argued away. Evidence of intention to kill.

Are You Really Too Fat Or Just Pleasingly Plump?

Are you kidding yourself into thinking that you are just pleasingly plump. If you are overweight there is no better time to correct your problem than right now. Read this letter from Mrs. Marie Markley, 1339 E. 289th St., Wickliffe, Ohio. Mrs. Markley writes: "I decided to try Rennel Concentrate because I was bulging in all the wrong places, and I had heard about its reducing qualities through friends. At first I didn't tell my husband, but finally I just had to explain why I was looking and feeling so much better. After taking the first bottle, my waist line was slimmer, and to my happy surprise I was able to wear a girdle I had not been able to get into for years. In continuing with Rennel I have found that along with its slenderizing value, it has also brought increased health to me. I look as fresh and young as if I'd never reduced, yet the flabby fat has disappeared from my abdomen and thighs. My husband has also started using it, and you may be sure we are both Rennel rooters now."

Thousands of others have overcome the social and physical discomfort of being overweight with this effective home recipe. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your druggist and ask for four ounces of liquid Rennel Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Then take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it. No diets to complicate your meal planning. No expensive vitamins to fortify your system from weakness while going without food for you can eat normally. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple easy way to lose pounds of bulky fat and help regain slender, more youthful curves — if reducible excess fat doesn't seem to disappear almost like magic just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. Insist on and be sure to get Rennel.

Roundtown Retrospect

By Mac Noggle

The very first guns in which our earliest settlers placed any confidence were the Matchlock muskets.

These weighed about 15 pounds and were about six feet long.. They were too heavy and unwieldly to fire from the shoulder, so it was always necessary to carry with the gun a firing rest when going hunting.

They were mazzle-loaders and with smoothbores — no two being the same size. As much as two ounces of powder was often used in the charge, so you can imagine what a flash, a roar and a cloud of smoke this would produce.

We've read accounts, written by some of the very old-timers, about their skill with the matchlock, but in some of these writings they even admitted that the game might have died of fright, instead of having been hit by a lead ball.

The maximum power of the projectile fired from a matchlock, was at a distance not to exceed fifty yards. One would think with such a charge of powder as was poured into these guns, the explosion would drive a bullet to kingdom come—but these were days before 100 per cent efficiency was ever heard of.

* * *

MUCH of the power of the explosion came out through the touch-hole in the barrel and then, too, the bullet was not always perfectly round and they never fit the barrel snugly.

No one thought of aiming, when firing one of these guns—in fact very few of them even had sights. The idea was to point the barrel in the general direction of the target, be it game or a foe, press the trigger and trust to luck that the lead reached its mark

However—it's surprising how effective these muskets were at close range. History reveals that they were really the cause of the quick downfall of the very early historic Indians.

Getting the matchlock ready, and to fire it, was a complicated and long drawn-out operation. With the barrel in an upright position, the hunter poured the coarse gun-powder from his horn or flask into the muzzle and on top of this dropped a lead ball, weighing about two ounces. Then the wadding was pushed into the gun barrel and pressed down tightly against the bullet with a long iron ramrod. The firing mechanism — the matchlock—was a sort of a clamp affair which held a slow-burning fuse, called the match.

Ofttimes both ends of the fuse were kept burning, so that if one went out, the other end was ready for business. When the hunter pressed the trigger, the clamp holding the burning fuse or match, dropped it into a pan of finely ground gun-powder. The flash of the powder of this primer passed through the touch-hole under the primer pan and into the barrel of the musket, and set fire to the charge.

In rainy weather, the matchlock was useless. Quite often there was a fizzle—the primer failed to light the charge. From this we get the common expression heard today—"it was a flash in the pan."

* * *

ON AN extended hunting trip, just imagine what all the hunter had to pack to be fully prepared for all contingencies. Besides the heavy musket and the firing rest, he would need a horn or two of the course powder for the charges and a flask of the finer priming powder, bullets and some extra lead and a mold to cast more if they were needed, extra match cords, flint and steel to light the matches and a bullet extractor, in case some of the balls got stuck in the barrel.

From time to time, improvements were made on the matchlock gun, but strange to say, none, for years, had anything to do with its greatest weakness, the firing mechanism. The first problem which was whipped was to reduce the weight and the size of the gun, getting it down to ten pounds and about four feet in length, so that it was no longer necessary to carry around a prop on which to rest the gun when firing.

Then came along the idea to standardize the bore so that bullets that would fit any gun were available. Many attempts were made to make loading easier—first there was the bandoleer, which was nothing more than a measured amount of powder for a single charge, placed in wooden cylinders.

Next came the very first cartridge for a gun — the powder charge and the lead ball all done up in one paper package — all you had to do to load the gun was to drop this into the muzzle —the bullet on top, of course— and then ram some wadding down on top of this.

But with all these new-fangled improvements, the hunter still had to depend on getting a 'flash in the pan" from a burning string to fire his musket. The first departure from this was known as the wheel-lock, which worked a good bit like our cigarette lighter.

A steel wheel, striking a piece of iron pyrite, made sparks which fell into the powder in the priming pan. This contrivance did away with the burning wick but was never popular — the mechanism was too complicated and the cost was out of reach of most of the people.

* * *

THE NEXT modern improvement was the snaphance, which reached this country, indirectly, from Germany. This was an adaptation of the centuries-old practice of getting a fire started by striking flint and steel together. A piece of flint was fastened to the hammer of the gun, and when let loose, by pressing the trigger, it sideswiped a piece of steel fastened just above the primer pan, and thus caused sparks to ignite the priming powder.

This was certainly a dangerous gun to be carrying around, loaded. The hammer had to be kept cocked and the priming pan, filled with powder, was always open.

Eventually the short-comings of the snaphance were corrected—like locking the hammer in a half-cocked position, so that a loaded gun could be safely carried—and having a pan cover, which opened when the trigger was squeezed and the flint attached to the hammer struck the steel over the pan.

And so was born the world-famous Flintlock Musket, the favorite hunting piece of the pioneer and the standard military weapon for infantrymen until after the war in Mexico in 1848.

UAW Says Ohio 'No' Vote Does Not Endanger Pay Plan

DETROIT (AP) — The CIO United Auto Workers Union declared today "the effectiveness" of its layoff pay plans in the auto industry was "not endangered" by the Ohio vote rejecting the CIO's plea for supplemental layoff pay.

The UAW in a statement said "the outcome of the Ohio referendum will not delay the beginning date of benefit payments."

Ohio voters decisively rejected a proposal that workers be permitted to draw state unemployment benefits at the same time they are getting layoff pay benefits from employers. The voters also refused to approve bigger unemployment benefits.

Discussing the effect of the Ohio decision on its contracts, the UAW said:

"Under the Ford and GM plans, benefits are payable beginning June 1, 1956, if states covering two-thirds of Ford and GM workers permit the receipt of unemployment compensation and supplemental unemployment benefits for the same week.

"Rulings already have been received from the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan and New York, covering more than 60 per cent of Ford and GM workers holding such integration is permissible under existing state law. No state has yet ruled to the contrary."

The UAW declared that "a failure by the Ohio state agency or the attorney general to interpret the law to permit the integration of supplemental unemployment benefits with state unemployment compensation will only penalize the citizens of Ohio."

Roundtown Retrospect

By Mac Noggle

The very first guns in which our earliest settlers placed any confidence were the Matchlock muskets.

These weighed about 15 pounds and were about six feet long. They were too heavy and unwieldly to fire from the shoulder, so it was always necessary to carry with the gun a firing rest when going hunting.

They were mazzle-loaders and with smoothbores — no two being the same size. As much as two ounces of powder was often used in the charge, so you can imagine what a flash, a roar and a cloud of smoke this would produce.

We've read accounts, written by some of the very old-timers, about their skill with the matchlock, but in some of these writings they even admitted that the game might have died of fright, instead of having been hit by a lead ball.

The maximum power of the projectile fired from a matchlock, was at a distance not to exceed fifty yards. One would think with such a charge of powder as was poured into these guns, the explosion would drive a bullet to kingdom come—but these were days before 100 per cent efficiency was ever heard of.

* * *

MUCH of the power of the explosion came out through the touch-hole in the barrel and then, too, the bullet was not always perfectly round and they never fit the barrel snugly.

No one thought of aiming, when firing one of these guns—in fact very few of them even had sights. The idea was to point the barrel in the general direction of the target, be it game or a foe, press the trigger and trust to luck that the lead reached its mark

However—it's surprising how effective these muskets were at close range. History reveals that they were really the cause of the quick downfall of the very early historic Indians.

Getting the matchlock ready, and to fire it, was a complicated and long drawn-out operation. With the barrel in an upright position, the hunter poured the coarse gun-powder from his horn or flask into the muzzle and on top of this dropped a lead ball, weighing about two ounces. Then the wadding was pushed into the gun barrel and pressed down tightly against the bullet with a long iron ramrod. The firing mechanism — the matchlock—was a sort of a clamp affair which held a slow-burning fuse, called the match.

Ofttimes both ends of the fuse were kept burning, so that if one went out, the other end was ready for business. When the hunter pressed the trigger, the clamp holding the burning fuse or match, dropped it into a pan of finely ground gun-powder. The flash of the powder of this primer passed through the touch-hole under the primer pan and into the barrel of the musket, and set fire to the charge.

In rainy weather, the matchlock was useless. Quite often there was a fizzle—the primer failed to light the charge. From this we get the common expression heard today—"it was a flash in the pan."

* * *

ON AN extended hunting trip, just imagine what all the hunter had to pack to be fully prepared for all contingencies. Besides the heavy musket and the firing rest, he would need a horn or two of the course powder for the charges and a flask of the finer priming powder, bullets and some extra lead and a mold to cast more if they were needed, extra match cords, flint and steel to light the matches and a bullet extractor, in case some of the balls got stuck in the barrel.

From time to time, improvements were made on the matchlock gun, but strange to say, none, for years, had anything to do with its greatest weakness, the firing mechanism. The first problem which was whipped was to reduce the weight and the size of the gun, getting it down to ten pounds and about four feet in length, so that it was no longer necessary to carry around a prop on which to rest the gun when firing.

Then came along the idea to standardize the bore so that bullets that would fit any gun were available. Many attempts were made to make loading easier—first there was the bandoleer, which was nothing more than a measured amount of powder for a single charge, placed in wooden cylinders.

Next came the very first cartridge for a gun — the powder charge and the lead ball all done up in one paper package — all you had to do to load the gun was to drop this into the muzzle —the bullet on top, of course— and then ram some wadding down on top of this.

But with all these new-fangled improvements, the hunter still had to depend on getting a 'flash in the pan" from a burning string to fire his musket. The first departure from this was known as the wheel-lock, which worked a good bit like our cigarette lighter.

A steel wheel, striking a piece of iron pyrite, made sparks which fell into the powder in the priming pan. This contrivance did away with the burning wick but was never popular — the mechanism was too complicated and the cost was out of reach of most of the people.

* * *

THE NEXT modern improvement was the snaphance, which reached this country, indirectly, from Germany. This was an adaptation of the centuries-old practice of getting a fire started by striking flint and steel together. A piece of flint was fastened to the hammer of the gun, and when let loose, by pressing the trigger, it sideswiped a piece of steel fastened just above the primer pan, and thus caused sparks to ignite the priming powder.

This was certainly a dangerous gun to be carrying around, loaded. The hammer had to be kept cocked and the priming pan, filled with powder, was always open.

Eventually the short-comings of the snaphance were corrected—like locking the hammer in a half-cocked position, so that a loaded gun could be safely carried—and having a pan cover, which opened when the trigger was squeezed and the flint attached to the hammer struck the steel over the pan.

And so was born the world-famous Flintlock Musket, the favorite hunting piece of the pioneer and the standard military weapon for infantrymen until after the war in Mexico in 1848.

Reds Threatening West Anew

Soviet Gnawing At 2 Flanks Of Vital Mid-East Region

Editor's Note:—The Soviet Union is gnawing away at both flanks of the anti-Communist line the West has set up all the way from North Africa to the borders of Pakistan. How events across this area have been playing into the hands of Soviet policy is discussed by William L. Ryan in this article, the final of three on the Middle East.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

According to Soviet propaganda, the "spirit of Geneva" can be violated only by the West.

Recently Moscow announced Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Soviet Communist boss Nikita Khrushchev plan to visit Afghanistan. The announcement was accompanied by this comment:

"The Soviet leaders' visit to Afghanistan is worthy of attention because it is a blow to the intrigues of those acting against the spirit of Genva, those who do not want a relaxation of international tension. . ."

But the real reason for the visit to Afghanistan appears to be the shift of scene in the cold war—away from the standoff produced by the Geneva spirit in Europe and into the volatile Middle East.

The new arena stretches thousands of miles from the top of North Africa to the borders of Pakistan. It is pockmarked with trouble, and the Soviet Union seems intent on stirring up more of the same.

Afghanistan has been an historic buffer to Russian imperial ambitions. Czarist and Soviet expansion stopped on its northern frontier. It separates the present-day Turkmen, Uzbek and Tadjik Soviet Republics from the Indian subcontinent. To its west is Iran, the link between Europe and Asia is the anti-communist defense framework.

Today Afghanistan represents an anchor of the current Soviet drive to splinter the line. At the moment it swarms with Soviet technicians who have built a cotton ginning plant, laid about 600 miles of telephone and telegraph cable, built oil storage units and provided the wherewithal for other projects useful in Soviet economic penetration of the backward country. All this, said Moscow, was in the spirit of cooperation with countries made backward "because of the imperialist domination of the West."

Now the Soviet bloc appears to be offering arms to Afghanistan, and an Afghan military delegation is due soon in Communist Czechoslovakia to see what the Czechs have to offer.

If the Afghan deal goes through—in view of the country's current bitter dispute with Pakistan it is likely to do so—it will be of a piece with the Soviet bloc offers of arms at cut rates to Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia.

Arms to the Arabs threaten a new Arab-Israeli war. Arms to Afghanistan could mean conflict, or at the least explosive tension, with Pakistan over the future of the seven million Pathan tribesmen in Pakistan's northwest frontier province.

On the other flank of the West's defenses, there has been cominform interference in France's troubls in North Africa. Thus far western observers can pin down nothing more specific than a flood of Cominform propaganda to North Africa and the offer of Communist help to extremists there. The goal obviously is to prevent any stability in the strategically important area. The French Communist party plays an important role.

There would seem to be little real connection between the rising storm clouds in the Middle East and the situations existing in French North Africa. But Soviet policy eventually may establish the connection in the broad offensive to capture a permanent bridgehead among the vast area's backward pepole.

Egypt presents a possible connecting link. Newly in possession of Red arms, Egypt makes menacing noises in the direction of Israel and carries on a torrent of propaganda in North Africa for "Arab liberation."

Russian offers of arms to the middle eastern countries have coincided with the signing of bilateral military pacts, Egypt—Saudi Arabia and Egypt-Syria, providing for unified commands and pooled expenses.

These pacts take the place of the all-Arab league defense pact of 1949 which followed the Palestine war and was ratified by all states of the league except Libya and the Yemen. The Arab league pact was ineffective because of the ties in Araq, Jordan and Libya with the West and the pro-western tendencies of Lebanon. The sudden acquisition by Egypt and other Arab states of military wealth might apply sufficient pressure to change that picture substantially.

With this offensive, the Russians appear to have persuaded the Arabs that they might force certain concessions out of the West—and particularly the United States—by a sort of blackmail. The idea seems implicit in broadcasts like this by the official Cairo radio:

"O, Arabs! The United States does not want to offer aid which is not backed by influence. She does not want to loan funds without interests in the form of colonization. There is one thing which may justifiably frighten the United States each time the aid of Russia to the Arabs increases. It is the possibility of increased hostility toward America by the Arabs. What should we do? Russia is courteous, helpful and cooperative toward us while you, the United States, shun us, let us down and prevent aid from reaching us. Logical is the old Egyptian saying: 'Help me and I will help you,' which is the basis of international politics."

Some American sources say there is a possibility that the changing military picture in the Middle East is less dangerous than it seems on the surface. They cite the amount of training the Arabs would require in the use of the arms, and Israel's present superiority in fighting potential. But others point out that this overlooks two things:

First, there is a possibility of Israel's taking the bull by the horns and launching a preventive war before the Arabs get too strong. Second, by the time the dust settled and the West could sense the danger, it might be too late to do anything about it.

Ohio Voters Very Selective On Pocketbook Ballot Issues

COLUMBUS (AP)—When it came to their own pocketbooks, Ohio voters were very selective Tuesday when they pondered local tax levies and bond issues.

Here's how the situation appeared on the basis of unofficial and, in some cases, incomplete returns:

In five representative counties, four bond issues totaling $26,100,000 were approved while four others amounting to about 10 million dollars were rejected.

In 10 counties where tax levies were an issue, seven levies passed while 11 others met defeat.

Springfield voters turned down a proposal to increase city income taxes but approved a $5,200,000 bond issue for new school facilities, adding to almost nine millions voted for schools since 1942.

Cuyahoga County voters approved a 10 million dollar bond issue and cleared the way for an east - west county highway and elimination of four railroad crossings.

In Cleveland, an eight million dollar bond issue for development of the city's lakefront facilities — in anticipation of the St. Lawrence Seaway completion — was overwhelmingly passed.

Supporters of a juvenile center in Montgomery County were rebuffed for the fourth time in 10 years when their proposal for a $1,400,000 bond issue failed by slightly more than one per cent of the needed 55 per cent voter approval.

Montgomery County voters also turned down two tax proposals. One was a 1-mill levy to build 17 bridges, the other, a ½-mill levy to support a pay raise for county employes and added welfare services.

Hamilton County voters rejected three bond issues. These were a three million dollar issue to purchase voting machines, a six million dollar issue to build an airport, and a Civil Defense bond issue.

Columbus voters balloted against a ¾-mill tax levy to improve and extend health department facilities.

In Mahoning County, a .65-mill renewal levy for a tuberculosis sanitarium was approved by a large majority.

Fremont voters approved a $2,900,000 high school bond issue, but a 1½-mill city tax levy was defeated.

Marion voters approved a 9.2-mill renewal levy to operate city schools, while Logan voters turned down a 1½-mill levy for the same purpose.

Marion County approved a ½-mill levy for a hospital wing on the county home. Hocking County voters rejected a 2-mill levy for operating expenses of county government.

In other issues, Zanesville and Portsmouth both voted on city manager proposals.

In Zanesville, where a part-time mayor type of government prevails, voters went almost 2-1 to change to a city-manager system. At the same time, they rejected another proposal to have a full-time mayor. The present mayor's term runs two more years.

Portsmouth voted to retain its city manager form of government which it has had for 25 years. A proposal to amend the city charter to allow a return to partisan mayor rule was defeated.

Dayton voted to change its city charter to allow political candidates to campaign in their own behalf.

And in Elyria, fluoridation of the city's water supply will continue, voters rejected a proposal to repeal an ordinance providing for the fluoridation which has been in effect for two years.

Voters in Canton approved renewal of a 9.59-mill levy for school operations.

Washington County defeated a $950,000 bond issue to improve the county courthouse. Marietta approved a .25-mill levy for schools.

Voters in Xenia approved a $1,300,000 school bond issue by a vote of 3,365 to 2,077.

In Allen County, 13 of 14 special issues carried with margins of from 2-1 to 5-1.

Lucas County and Toledo voters approved by 2-1 a tax levy that will yield an estimated 2.9 million dollars to develop the port of Toledo during the next five years. County voters also endorsed tax levies for county operating expenses, the county hospital and William Roche TB hospital. A Toledo school levy was renewed.

Wable Reward Split Studied

PITTSBURGH (AP)—John Wesley Wable, 26, the executed "Phantom Killer" of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, had $1,000 in reward money hanging over his head.

U. S. District Court now has to decide who will get $6,000 of the money offered for the conviction of the man who shot and killed two truck drivers on the toll road and wounded a third in the summer of 1953. No announcement has been made as to how the other $5,000 will be awarded.

World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press
News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court may have listened for the last time to arguments about racial segregation in any place—city or state—that is supported by public tax money, like a school beach, park, or playground.

It has already laid down the doctrine, giving its reasons at length, that this sort of segregation is unconstitutional. It may never again bother to give its reasons in ruling on any future case of this kind.

In any such case appealed to it from a lower federal court, the Supreme Court may simply say "affirmed" or "reversed," depending on whether the lower court has ruled in accordance with, or contrary to, the high court's doctrine.

An indication of this can be read into the way the Supreme Court handled a couple of segregation cases this week.

In any appeal to the high court from the ruling of a lower court, the lawyers on both sids state their arguments in writing. The nine justices of the Supreme Court get copies of these arguments.

The lawyers can't walk up before the justices and argue orally. It is only when the justices want more information than is contained in the written arguments that they ask the lawyers on both sides to appear in court and speak their piece.

In the 1890s the Supreme Court blessed segregation with a ruling which said Negroes could be kept out of public places reserves for whites, provided that the Negroes, while kept separate, were given public facilities equal to those of the whites. This became known as the doctrine of "Separate but Equal." For half a century no later Supreme Court knocked it down.

As a result, segregation continued in public schools and other public places throughout the South and in other states. But in 1954 the present Supreme Court unanimously wiped out the "separate but equal" doctrine in the case of public schools.

That kind of segregation, the court said, was unconstitutional and must stop. But this ruling dealt with schools. Did the Supreme Court mean segregation was illegal in other public places, too? For instance, in parks and playgrounds?

Already two test cases were moving through the lower courts. Maryland had segregated public parks and beaches. Georgia had segregated public golf courses. A U.S. Court of Appeals which covers Maryland cited the Supreme Court ruling in the school case, said it applied to parks and beaches, and ordered segregation in Maryland's public parks and beaches ended.

But another U.S. Court of Appeals, one which covered Georgia, ruled that it was all right to have segregation on public golf courses. Both cases were appealed to the Supreme Court.

The court considered the written arguments of the lawyers in both cases but called none of them to state their cases orally. It had heard long oral arguments in the school case.

The court, deciding its ruling against segregation in public schools applied to segregation in other public-supported places, apparently felt it neither had to listen to more oral arguments nor explain its own position further.

So, in rulings about as brief as it could make them, the high court did this:

It said the lower court was right in following the Supreme Court's lead by knocking out segregation in the Maryland case. It said the other lower court was wrong in ignoring the Supreme Court's lead and approving segregation on Georgia's golf links. That meant segregation on those golf links had to end.

Marilyn Monroe Outlines Plans For Acting Career

EDITOR'S NOTE: No film star in rcent years has struck the national fancy with greater impact than Marilyn Monroe. In an exclusive interview, Bob Thomas describes her present life and future plans, plus the background of her tiff with her studio. This is the first of two articles.

By BOB THOMAS

NEW YORK (AP)—Marilyn Monroe says she intends to be a permanent resident of New York, but will go to Hollywood for occasional movies.

In a rare interview, she also disclosed:

That she considers herself free of her film contract;

That she is willing to return to work at 20th Century-Fox—under conditions;

That she doesn't insist on doing straight dramatic parts only.

The scene was the Edwardian room of the Hotel Plaza. Marilyn came to breakfast, dressed in a black skirt; brown jersey top, tweed coat and a fuzzy white tam atop her honey-blonde hair. Despite dark glasses and no make-up, her entrance attracted the stares of others in the room.

She seemed to talk more freely than I ever heard her do in Hollywood. She was especially enthusiastic about New York.

"I live it here," she remarked. "I lived in California all my life; now I plan to stay here. The California climate is wonderful, but I love to see the seasons."

Marilyn came to New York a year ago, following her divorce from Joe DiMaggio. She announced plans to study dramatics here and produce pictures for her own company. Her studio declared she is still under contract and has sought her return.

She discussed her return to work, a matter in which 20th-Fox is extremely interested.

"I'm willing to go back to work—as long as I can get what I want," she said. "It's the same thing I've always wanted. I want to work with good directors, ones I can learn from. I want a variety of roles in good stories. And I want to make pictures for my own company.

"Money has never been an issue. The studio can afford to pay me."

She reported her own company is negotiating for a story to film. But is she free to work?

"I have no contract," she said flatly. "There are good reasons why my contract with Fox is not valid."

The studio doesn't see it her way, and the matter is up to the courts.

She is being asked to return to the studio for "Bus Stop." She said she'd like to do the role—if she gets her terms.

Her best acting role, she said, was the one that started her off to fame—in "The Asphalt Jungle." She made it plain that the pictures she doesn't want to do are ones like "Pink Tights" and "How To Be Very, Very Popular." She was suspended for refusing those two.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court may have listened for the last time to arguments about racial segregation in any place—city or state—that is supported by public tax money, like a school beach, park, or playground.

It has already laid down the doctrine, giving its reasons at length, that this sort of segregation is unconstitutional. It may never again bother to give its reasons in ruling on any future case of this kind.

In any such case appealed to it from a lower federal court, the Supreme Court may simply say "affirmed" or "reversed," depending on whether the lower court has ruled in accordance with, or contrary to, the high court's doctrine.

An indication of this can be read into the way the Supreme Court handled a couple of segregation cases this week.

In any appeal to the high court from the ruling of a lower court, the lawyers on both sids state their arguments in writing. The nine justices of the Supreme Court get copies of these arguments.

The lawyers can't walk up before the justices and argue orally. It is only when the justices want more information than is contained in the written arguments that they ask the lawyers on both sides to appear in court and speak their piece.

In the 1890s the Supreme Court blessed segregation with a ruling which said Negroes could be kept out of public places reserves for whites, provided that the Negroes, while kept separate, were given public facilities equal to those of the whites. This became known as the doctrine of "Separate but Equal." For half a century no later Supreme Court knocked it down.

As a result, segregation continued in public schools and other public places throughout the South and in other states. But in 1954 the present Supreme Court unanimously wiped out the "separate but equal" doctrine in the case of public schools.

That kind of segregation, the court said, was unconstitutional and must stop. But this ruling dealt with schools. Did the Supreme Court mean segregation was illegal in other public places, too? For instance, in parks and playgrounds?

Already two test cases were moving through the lower courts. Maryland had segregated public parks and beaches. Georgia had segregated public golf courses. A U.S. Court of Appeals which covers Maryland cited the Supreme Court ruling in the school case, said it applied to parks and beaches, and ordered segregation in Maryland's public parks and beaches ended.

But another U.S. Court of Appeals, one which covered Georgia, ruled that it was all right to have segregation on public golf courses. Both cases were appealed to the Supreme Court.

The court considered the written arguments of the lawyers in both cases but called none of them to state their cases orally. It had heard long oral arguments in the school case.

The court, deciding its ruling against segregation in public schools applied to segregation in other public-supported places, apparently felt it neither had to listen to more oral arguments nor explain its own position further.

So, in rulings about as brief as it could make them, the high court did this:

It said the lower court was right in following the Supreme Court's lead by knocking out segregation in the Maryland case. It said the other lower court was wrong in ignoring the Supreme Court's lead and approving segregation on Georgia's golf links. That meant segregation on those golf links had to end.

Marilyn Monroe Outlines Plans For Acting Career

EDITOR'S NOTE: No film star in rcent years has struck the national fancy with greater impact than Marilyn Monroe. In an exclusive interview, Bob Thomas describes her present life and future plans, plus the background of her tiff with her studio. This is the first of two articles.

By BOB THOMAS

NEW YORK (AP)—Marilyn Monroe says she intends to be a permanent resident of New York, but will go to Hollywood for occasional movies.

In a rare interview, she also disclosed:

That she considers herself free of her film contract;

That she is willing to return to work at 20th Century-Fox—under conditions;

That she doesn't insist on doing straight dramatic parts only.

The scene was the Edwardian room of the Hotel Plaza. Marilyn came to breakfast, dressed in a black skirt; brown jersey top, tweed coat and a fuzzy white tam atop her honey-blonde hair. Despite dark glasses and no make-up, her entrance attracted the stares of others in the room.

She seemed to talk more freely than I ever heard her do in Hollywood. She was especially enthusiastic about New York.

"I live it here," she remarked. "I lived in California all my life; now I plan to stay here. The California climate is wonderful, but I love to see the seasons."

Marilyn came to New York a year ago, following her divorce from Joe DiMaggio. She announced plans to study dramatics here and produce pictures for her own company. Her studio declared she is still under contract and has sought her return.

She discussed her return to work, a matter in which 20th-Fox is extremely interested.

"I'm willing to go back to work—as long as I can get what I want," she said. "It's the same thing I've always wanted. I want to work with good directors, ones I can learn from. I want a variety of roles in good stories. And I want to make pictures for my own company.

"Money has never been an issue. The studio can afford to pay me."

She reported her own company is negotiating for a story to film. But is she free to work?

"I have no contract," she said flatly. "There are good reasons why my contract with Fox is not valid."

The studio doesn't see it her way, and the matter is up to the courts.

She is being asked to return to the studio for "Bus Stop." She said she'd like to do the role—if she gets her terms.

Her best acting role, she said, was the one that started her off to fame—in "The Asphalt Jungle." She made it plain that the pictures she doesn't want to do are ones like "Pink Tights" and "How To Be Very, Very Popular." She was suspended for refusing those two.

Every Day 'Veterans Day' At Tomb Of Unknown Hero

The gray bulk of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery at Washington, symbol of a nation's homage to its war dead on Veterans Day, is both inspiration and duty-post for 16 of the U. S. Army's finest troops every day of the year.

They are the selected members of the Third Infantry Regiment who constitute the Honor Guard for this most honored of American soldiers.

Their names reflect all the national and religious strains that might have gone into the making of the nameless one who sleeps beneath the stone marker — Strohmaier, Curtin, Gira Wieland, Quinn, Kozlowski, Zych, Parissidi, Thomas, Braun, Allan, Schlichtling, Tanner, Firl, Wadlinger.

In foul weather or clear, under skies bright or leaden, by day and by night, each in turn keeps the watch, his solitary, soldierly pacing a reminder that this tomb is a shrine, sacred to the people of the United States.

* * *

TO THESE soldiers, the honor they are privileged to give is the greatest honor they could ask.

"It's the proudest duty a soldier can have," is the way the Sergeant of the Guard, Master Sergeant Woodrow W. Magnum of Louisburg, N. C., puts it.

Magnum, a 15-year veteran of World War II whose lifelong ambition has been his present assignment, knows that he speaks not only for himself but his men; his is the rsponsibility to select each of them, the 12 sentinels and the three Corporals of the Guard.

"Unless a soldier considers this duty the honor it is, he cannot qualify," the sergeant says.

This attitude, of course, is only one step in the selective process.

It begins, actually, when a man becomes a member of the regiment, oldest of such Regular Army units, designated the official ceremonial regiment when reactivated in April of 1948.

* * *

THIRD Infantrymen must conform to certain physical requirements: height, not more than six feet, three inches, nor less than five feet, nine inches; weight, evenly distributed within limits of 145 to 200 pounds (Tomb guards must be at least six feet tall.)

They must show records unblemished by periods of absence without leave or confinement; all must be single and look well in their uniforms. They must be above-average in intelligence. Final selection for duty with the regiment depends upon personal interviews before a board of officers.

Duty with the Honor Guard is voluntary. The request is made through the applicant's regimental platoon sergeant to the Sergeant of the Guard at the Tomb.

Since so many volunteer for the coveted few spaces in the guard, selection at this point becomes very personal indeed.

Magnum makes unannounced visits to prospective candidates to check how they get along with their buddies, their appearance at formations and the manner in which they perform company duties.

If it's a case of so far, so good, up to this point, Magnum then has the soldier-applicant in for an interview. He impresses the man with the rigors of the job — the the heat, the cold. He points out that a man's personal behavior must be above reproach.

* * *

"WE CAN tolerate no deviation from high standards of behavior here—not even profanity," Magnum says "This, remember, is a shrine; the men who serve here must consider their jobs in that light, off-duty and on."

Once assigned to the guard, a sentinel walks the rubber mat in front of the Tomb—a paced distance of some 23 to 25 steps — at a cadence of 128 paces a minute for an hour at a time.

He pauses 20 seconds after each facing movement and stands at attention for ten seconds when the Tomb is saluted at the changing of the guard. At no time does his head waver from the infantryman's well - disciplined "eyes front."

The guard is changed every hour on the hour by the Corporal of the Guard. There are three reliefs — four sentinels and a Corporal of the Guard—with each on duty for 24 hours and off for 48 hours. They live in quarters under the Trophy Room in the amphitheater near the Tomb when on duty.

Cincy Starts Complicated Vote Count

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two incumbent members of the nine-man Cincinnati City Council—a Republican and a Charterite—apparently were assured of re-election today.

But from there on the issue was very much in doubt. The council might have a 5-4 makeup and either party could have the majority. Or it might be a 4-4-1 affair with four Republicans, four Charterites and one independent, just as it is now.

Under Cincinnati's proportional representation system of voting it will be days before the final outcome is determined.

Apparently assured of re-election however, were Republican Mayor Carl W. Rich and Charterite Theodore Berry. Both had more first choice votes than is expected to be needed for election.

Under the PR system, the total number of first choice votes is divided by 10 and then 1 is added to arrive at the number of first choice votes needed for election.

After that, surplus votes over the quota are divided among lower choices. Candidates lowest in first place votes are eliminated in order and their votes are distributed until nine finally are declared elected.

Informer Points To Accused Reds

CLEVELAND (AP)—An ex-Communist who turned informer for the FBI was the government's first witness yesterday in the trial of 11 alleged Ohio Communist leaders charged with plotting to teach and advocate the government's violent overthrow.

The witness, William Garfield Cummings, 44, of Toledo, testified he saw defendant Anthony Krchmarek at a Communist training session in 1945 at Chicago. Earlier he said he recognized the names of eight defendants, linking six of them to party affairs in Cleveland and New York.

Cummings, who joined the party in 1943, has testified against top Red officials in previous trials involving the Smith Act. The trial here is the 12th in the nation dealing with the act.

Jobless Pay Sought

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation says there were 7,468 new applicants for jobless pay and 27,232 out of work one week or more during the week ended last Saturday.

Sokolsky's These Days

These investigations may proceed before the money is appropriated and after it is spent. There can be no safe limit on Congressional investigations if the people are to have the information they need to make intelligent decisions concerning government and the men who hold office.

The suggestion that the Democrats are wrong in continuing their investigations is purely political. The Eisenhower Administration's choice to oppose Republican investigations of precedent Democratic Administrations was an error of political and civil judgment and now may result in Democratic investigations heaping upon Republicans responsibility for Democratic faults.

The reason for this is that Executive action is continuous and cumulative and does not end when a party goes out of power. The Department of Agriculture finds itself in precisely that situation. Its Secretary, Ezra Taft Benson, inherited an extremely evil situation, both as to policy and administration, and was not permitted to do too much about it. Upon him will be heaped criticism for mistakes in judgment made since the AAA was organized.

Slow Improvement Is Seen In Quality Of Video Films

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—It seems to me there's a slow but steady improvement in the quality of films which the big Hollywood studios are turning out for television.

Even as recently as a year ago Hollywood appeared to feel that televsion was still a bogeyman; if it paid no attention, the monstrous upstart might go away. Finally, however, it recognized the ghost had substance.

For a time there was one of those vacant-minded arguments: If people saw the best that Hollywood could do on their TV sets, would they bother to go and see the best in a movie theater? As a result, it sometimes seemed the studios were giving not even of their second-best but only of their third-best on television.

Now, I believe, the tide has turned Hollywood recognizes that a best effort in TV film entertainment and a best effort in movie theater entertainment are not mutually exclusive.

Warner Brothers has buckled down and is turning out better movies on its ABC-TV show, Tuesday.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which makes television versions of past movie successes, has struck a high level of entertainment on its program which appears on alternate Wednesdays on CBS-TV.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made improvements on its program of excerpts from past film hits and new films coming on ABC-TV Wednesday.

UAW Votes Down New Strike Fund

CLEVELAND (AP)—The convention of the AFL United Automobile Workers Union yesterday rejected a proposal to increase dues from $2 to $7 a month to build up a $2½ million strike fund.

The vote among the 700 delegates, representing 10,000 members, was more than 12 to 1 against the proposal.

Mother Accused In Child-Burning

MIDDLETOWN (AP)—Mrs. Christine Frazier, 25, was charged last night with maiming her three-year-old daughter. The child suffered burns on Nov. 1 when scalding water was thrown over her.

Patrolman Theodore Thompson, who signed the warrant against Mrs. Frazier, said the woman apparently meant to throw the water on her husband, Joe Frazier, with whom she was quarreling. Some of the water hit Frazier and he suffered minor burns.

The child was reported in fair condition today.

Budget Boosted

MIDDLETOWN (AP)—The Middletown City Commission last night adopted a proposed 1956 budget calling for appropriations of $1,525,562 for the general fund. It was an increase of $221,046 over last year.

Under Cincinnati's proportional representation system of voting it will be days before the final outcome is determined.

Apparently assured of re-election however, were Republican Mayor Carl W. Rich and Charterite Theodore Berry. Both had more first choice votes than is expected to be needed for election.

Under the PR system, the total number of first choice votes is divided by 10 and then 1 is added to arrive at the number of first choice votes needed for election.

After that, surplus votes over the quota are divided among lower choices. Candidates lowest in first place votes are eliminated in order and their votes are distributed until nine finally are declared elected.

Informer Points To Accused Reds

CLEVELAND (AP)—An ex-Communist who turned informer for the FBI was the government's first witness yesterday in the trial of 11 alleged Ohio Communist leaders charged with plotting to teach and advocate the government's violent overthrow.

The witness, William Garfield Cummings, 44, of Toledo, testified he saw defendant Anthony Krchmarek at a Communist training session in 1945 at Chicago. Earlier he said he recognized the names of eight defendants, linking six of them to party affairs in Cleveland and New York.

Cummings, who joined the party in 1943, has testified against top Red officials in previous trials involving the Smith Act. The trial here is the 12th in the nation dealing with the act.

These investigations may proceed before the money is appropriated and after it is spent. There can be no safe limit on Congressional investigations if the people are to have the information they need to make intelligent decisions concerning government and the men who hold office.

The suggestion that the Democrats are wrong in continuing their investigations is purely political. The Eisenhower Administration's choice to oppose Republican investigations of precedent Democratic Administrations was an error of political and civil judgment and now may result in Democratic investigations heaping upon Republicans responsibility for Democratic faults.

The reason for this is that Executive action is continuous and cumulative and does not end when a party goes out of power. The Department of Agriculture finds itself in precisely that situation. Its Secretary, Ezra Taft Benson, inherited an extremely evil situation, both as to policy and administration, and was not permitted to do too much about it. Upon him will be heaped criticism for mistakes in judgment made since the AAA was organized.

Slow Improvement Is Seen In Quality Of Video Films

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—It seems to me there's a slow but steady improvement in the quality of films which the big Hollywood studios are turning out for television.

Even as recently as a year ago Hollywood appeared to feel that television was still a bogeyman; if it paid no attention, the monstrous upstart might go away. Finally, however, it recognized the ghost had substance.

For a time there was one of those vacant-minded arguments: If people saw the best that Hollywood could do on their TV sets, would they bother to go and see the best in a movie theater? As a result, it sometimes seemed the studios were giving not even of their second-best but only of their third-best on television.

Now, I believe, the tide has turned Hollywood recognizes that a best effort in TV film entertainment and a best effort in movie theater entertainment are not mutually exclusive.

Warner Brothers has buckled down and is turning out better movies on its ABC-TV show, Tuesday.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which makes television versions of past movie successes, has struck a high level of entertainment on its program which appears on alternate Wednesdays on CBS-TV.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made improvements on its program of excerpts from past film hits and new films coming on ABC-TV Wednesday.

UAW Votes Down New Strike Fund

CLEVELAND (AP)—The convention of the AFL United Automobile Workers Union yesterday rejected a proposal to increase dues from $2 to $7 a month to build up a $2½ million strike fund.

The vote among the 700 delegates, representing 10,000 members, was more than 12 to 1 against the proposal.

Mother Accused In Child-Burning

MIDDLETOWN (AP)—Mrs. Christine Frazier, 25, was charged last night with maiming her three-year-old daughter. The child suffered burns on Nov. 1 when scalding water was thrown over her.

Patrolman Theodore Thompson, who signed the warrant against Mrs. Frazier, said the woman apparently meant to throw the water on her husband, Joe Frazier, with whom she was quarreling. Some of the water hit Frazier and he suffered minor burns.

The child was reported in fair condition today.

Budget Boosted

MIDDLETOWN (AP)—The Middletown City Commission last night adopted a proposed 1956 budget calling for appropriations of $1,525,562 for the general fund. It was an increase of $221,046 over last year.

County League Court Action In 2nd Week

County league basketball will shift into high gear Friday with five league games on tap. Saltcreek draws the bye,

Top feature of the night will be the clash between last year's co-champs, Scioto and Ashville. Scioto topped Ashville in a league tilt last year but the Broncos came back to beat the Buffaloes in tournament play.

The Friday night game, which will be played at Ashville, will be the Broncos' first of the current season. Scioto won its league opener with Atlanta last Friday, 74-67.

The fast Jackson team, which won handily over Williamsport, 78-45 last Friday hosts the Atlanta Red Raiders who have lost their first league start but have a non-conference victory to their credit.

NEW HOLLAND, which won a squeaker from Madison Mills last week, travels to play the Monroe Indians.

Darby, last Friday's winner over Saltcreek, will battle it out with the Williamsport Deers on the Deers' floor. Williamsport lost both of its previous outings.

The tall Pickaway quintet will try to take its second victory of the season when it plays Walnut on the Tigers' floor.

Briton Sets Sights On Boat Record

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Britisher Donald Campbell in his jet-powered Bluebird takes another crack today at his own water speed record of 202.32 mph.

The fast-moving son of the late land and water racer, Sir Malcolm Campbell, will make the official try over a measured kilometer—or ⅝ of a mile—course. Campbell said he thought he broke 220 mph during a test run yesterday.

Deer Permits To Go On Sale

Deer hunting permits will be available in Pickaway County starting on Friday.

Bob Wolf, secretary of the Pickaway Farmers and Sportsmen Association, reminds hunters that applicants for these licenses must appear in person and sign an affidavit. Licenses may be obtained at: Harpster and Yost, Western Auto, Ralph Haines and Boyer Hardware — all in Circleville.

There is no deer hunting in Pickaway County, according to County Game Protector Clarence Francis. However, he added, many of the surrounding counties allow deer hunting.

Deer hunting with shotguns will be from Dec. 1-23. Hunting with bow and arrow, which is becoming an increasingly popular sport, will be allowed from Nov. 24 to Dec. 15.

Wolf reminded hunters that the 25-cent fee, which is collected with the $5 cost of the license, will be returned to the Pickaway Farmers and Sportsmen Association for use in conservation projects in the county. Wolf added that hunters must have a regular hunting license before the deer permit can be purchased.

Schools Reminded To Call In Results

County League schools are reminded to phone in results of league tilts at 10:15 p. m. the same night to the Herald office. Home floor teams are to call either 580 or 581 if a Herald reporter is not at the game.

Call in non-league games the morning after at about 8 a. m. Scores not received by the Herald as yet are the Clarksburg-Atlanta and Darby-Midway contests.

Schedules still have not been received from Saltcreek, Williamsport and Scioto.

For '56 New Sweep-ahead styling New Sizzle to match

The 1956 Buick SUPER 4-Door Riviera

What you see pictured here is Buick for 1956—and from the gleam of that "V" grille to the sassy slant of the tail fins, you can see it has no equal for gorgeous good looks.

But what you see from the curb is more than matched by what you feel at the wheel—and that's gospel.

For this Buick gets its zoom from a mighty 322-cubic-inch V8 engine lofted to a new record high in power and compression—and from a spectacular new advance in Variable Pitch Dynaflow.*

What's new in the '56 Dynaflow is this: in the first inch of pedal travel—and not with wide-open throttle—your Buick moves from standstill to cruise with silk-smooth, instant and certain getaway.

But comes a sudden need for safety-surge action to get out of a tight spot—and you floor the pedal to switch the pitch of this airplane-inspired transmission. Instantly and smoothly, you're at full-power acceleration—a thrill beyond words.

There's a lot more we could tell you about these great new Buicks—about brilliant new interiors, a superb new ride with a safer "sense of direction," and new safety features everywhere you look.

But the best way to get the whole story of the best Buick yet is right at the wheel of one of these '56 beauties. So drop in this week and do just that.

County League Court Action In 2nd Week

County league basketball will shift into high gear Friday with five league games on tap. Saltcreek draws the bye,

Top feature of the night will be the clash between last year's co-champs, Scioto and Ashville. Scioto topped Ashville in a league tilt last year but the Broncos came back to beat the Buffaloes in tournament play.

The Friday night game, which will be played at Ashville, will be the Broncos' first of the current season. Scioto won its league opener with Atlanta last Friday, 74-67.

The fast Jackson team, which won handily over Williamsport, 78-45 last Friday hosts the Atlanta Red Raiders who have lost their first league start but have a non-conference victory to their credit.

NEW HOLLAND, which won a squeaker from Madison Mills last week, travels to play the Monroe Indians.

Darby, last Friday's winner over Saltcreek, will battle it out with the Williamsport Deers on the Deers' floor. Williamsport lost both of its previous outings.

The tall Pickaway quintet will try to take its second victory of the season when it plays Walnut on the Tigers' floor.

Briton Sets Sights On Boat Record

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Britisher Donald Campbell in his jet-powered Bluebird takes another crack today at his own water speed record of 202.32 mph.

The fast-moving son of the late land and water racer, Sir Malcolm Campbell, will make the official try over a measured kilometer—or ⅝ of a mile—course. Campbell said he thought he broke 220 mph during a test run yesterday.

Deer Permits To Go On Sale

Deer hunting permits will be available in Pickaway County starting on Friday.

Bob Wolf, secretary of the Pickaway Farmers and Sportsmen Association, reminds hunters that applicants for these licenses must appear in person and sign an affidavit. Licenses may be obtained at: Harpster and Yost, Western Auto, Ralph Haines and Boyer Hardware — all in Circleville.

There is no deer hunting in Pickaway County, according to County Game Protector Clarence Francis. However, he added, many of the surrounding counties allow deer hunting.

Deer hunting with shotguns will be from Dec. 1-23. Hunting with bow and arrow, which is becoming an increasingly popular sport, will be allowed from Nov. 24 to Dec. 15.

Wolf reminded hunters that the 25-cent fee, which is collected with the $5 cost of the license, will be returned to the Pickaway Farmers and Sportsmen Association for use in conservation projects in the county. Wolf added that hunters must have a regular hunting license before the deer permit can be purchased.

Schools Reminded To Call In Results

County League schools are reminded to phone in results of league tilts at 10:15 p. m. the same night to the Herald office. Home floor teams are to call either 580 or 581 if a Herald reporter is not at the game.

Call in non-league games the morning after at about 8 a. m. Scores not received by the Herald as yet are the Clarksburg-Atlanta and Darby-Midway contests.

Schedules still have not been received from Saltcreek, Williamsport and Scioto.
